Senate Cuts $90,000,000 From River, Harbor Bill

Vandenberg Hits Measure, Warns U. S. Is Rushing Into Bankruptcy

By John B. Oakes

On top of a charge by Senator Vandenberg that the Nation is rushing "pell-mell" into bankruptcy, the Senate yesterday struck two major projects out of a $231,000,000 bill authorizing river and harbor improvements.

Slashing the measure by nearly $90,000,000, or 40 per cent, the Senate voted down both the Tombigbee River and Umatilla Dam projects after hearing assertions that the President would veto the bill if it contained these two items.

The $66,000,000 project to connect the Tennessee with the Tombigbee River in Alabama was disapproved, 56 to 17, with Minority Leader McNary smilingly casting the only favorable Republican vote.

Soon afterward, the $23,700,000 Umatilla Dam on the Columbia River, sponsored by Senator McNary, went down to defeat by the close vote of 35 to 33. Both projects had been inserted in the bill by the Senate Commerce Committee, although the House turned thumbs down on them last year.

East River Project Is Largest

Except for Tombigbee and Umatilla, nearly all of the 141 separate items in the bill had been approved when the Senate recessed today. Largest project remaining in the measure is an authorization of $34,509,000 for deepening the East River in New York City solely for national defense purposes.

Denouncing the entire bill as "basically indefensible at a time when the Treasury is worse than bankrupt," Senator Vandenberg concentrated his attack principally against the Tombigbee waterway.

The project, he said, is "just as ludicrous as the Florida Ship Canal," which he did much to defeat in the Senate last year.

"Except as we watch our step, we shall run squarely into bankruptcy," shouted Vandenberg. "Those are not my words; they are the President's, uttered seven years ago, since which time our speed into bankruptcy has been nothing less than pell-mell.

"During the lush Twenties, we rarely had a river and harbor bill in excess of $50,000,000 and in the bankrupt Forties we are prepared to swallow an authorization of $231,000,000. That I refuse to do."

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, on the other hand, maintained that the Tombigbee project could be justified on a National defense basis as extending the country's inland waterway system in case of a coastal attack.

President Objected

It was brought out in debate that the Commerce Committee had been told by a White House spokesman that the President objected to inclusion of Tombigbee and Umatilla in the bill.

The bill, which was reduced to $141,390,950 by the Senate's action, merely authorizes construction of the various projects after July 1, 1941, and provides that the work shall be extended over a period of seven years. Several projects for the lower Potomac River and for Chesapeake Bay are included in the bill.

Wallace, Black To Be Called About Letter

House Committee To Weigh Lobbying Law Breach Charge

By Hedley Donovan.

The House Agriculture Committee voted yesterday to summon Secretary Wallace and Gov. A. G. Black, of the Farm Credit Administration, to answer charges that their recent letter to 630,000 land bank borrowers violated laws against lobbying by Federal officials.

By a vote of 13 to 10, it was reported, the committee agreed to "invite" Wallace and Black to explain "under what authority" they issued their memorandum of April 10. The memorandum mentioned no pending legislation but indorsed three major provisions of the Jones farm credit bill, which is still before the House committee.

Representative Clifford Hope (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the committee and sponsor of the motion adopted yesterday, asserted that the Black-Wallace letter was "an obvious attempt to influence the votes of these

Lawrence Quits Party Post As Guffey Wins

State Chairman To Retire; G. O. P. Outpolls Opponents

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 24.—Senator Joseph F. Guffey, victor in the Democratic Senatorial primary, took over control tonight of the party in Pennsylvania as his foremost opponent, David L. Lawrence, announced he would retire as State chairman.

Guffey defeated Lawrence's choice for the nomination, Walter A. Jones, in yesterday's primary balloting by almost 100,000 votes.

As the mounting returns clinched the contest for the Senator, Lawrence, who had called Guffey a "party wrecker" because of tactics since their split in the 1938 primary, said he would not seek reelection as chairman when his term expires in June.

Guffey immediately asserted he would proceed to "reorganize" the party for the November campaign, "eliminating all the elements of discord."

Lawrence and Guffey had been political friends for 25 years.

The Senatorial contest overshadowed an otherwise listless primary in which the Democrats cast almost a half-million votes for President Roosevelt, and the Republicans wrote in the names of Thomas E. Dewey, Gov. Arthur H. James and others on the preferential Presidential ballot. Dewey, with 8,700, topped James, in second place, 6-to-1.

The Republicans, with a lead of a half million in registrations, outpolled the Democrats.

The Republican organization slate, headed by Jay Cooke, of Philadelphia, for the United States Senate, swamped Independent opposition.

Cooke asserted the "wide margin between the Democratic and Republican votes cast assures proof that the citizens of this State are

Woman Identifies Virginia Youth As Kidnaper

A 19-year-old Virginia high school student who represented himself as "No. 6" in a Virginia auto larceny ring, was identified early today by Miss Ethel Krieger, 25, of 1125 Twelfth street northwest, as the man who kidnaped her here Sunday night.

Miss Krieger identified the youth at Police headquarters shortly after his arrest by Lieut. E. J. McDermott, of the Virginia State Police, in Fairfax, Va.

McDermott noticed Miss Krieger's stolen automobile, parked in Fairfax. He arrested the youth when he attempted to drive it away.

'Would Never Run Away'

Police Intensify Hunt for Girl Mother Believes Held or Injured

Apprehension over the safety of Marion Louise Kerr, 15-year-old Paul Junior High School girl, missing since Monday afternoon from her home at 60 Farragut place northwest, increased last night as police reported "no progress" in their search.

The shy, retiring youngster, who once won honors as the "prize baby" of the Panama Canal Zone, where she was born, has not been seen since leaving her home at 4:45 p. m. Monday to attend the York Theater on Georgia avenue.

Mrs. Abbie Kerr, the girl's mother, convinced Marion is not a runaway, is fearful the child is being forcibly held or is injured and unable to communicate with her home. The mother was near collapse last night.

Although she had access to a considerable amount of money in the Kerr Apartment, Marion had only 30 cents when she disappeared, police were told.

This led police to believe the girl had not planned to leave home. Neighbors who knew the child also agreed with Mrs. Kerr that "Marion would never run away."

"She is too sweet and liked her home too well to do such a thing," said one neighbor.

"I can't believe she would stay away this long without telling us where she was," said Mrs. Kerr. "I'm so afraid something dreadful has happened to her."

Slush Fund Inquiry Eyes 2 More States

Investigators Enter Nebraska, W. Va.; Neely Asks G-Men Clean 'Augean Stable'

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate's special campaign committee yesterday dispatched investigators to West Virginia to study alleged slush fund spending and to Nebraska to investigate use of funds in recent sharply contested Presidential primaries.

The two States were added to the committee's rapidly broadening campaign inquiry as Chairman Guy M. Gillette called on his Maryland investigators to report to him Saturday on alleged heavy spending in the Democratic Senatorial primaries there. He said he would determine then whether evidence warrants keeping them there.

Gillette disclosed no details of the Nebraska and West Virginia inquiries, but Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, said the latter investigation was made at his request and was directed chiefly at use of 2 per cent club funds by the "Statehouse machine" in the gubernatorial and Senatorial primaries.

Calls for G-Men

Neely, who is running for Governor of West Virginia against State administration opposition, said he also had asked the Justice Department to send G-men "to help clean out this Augean stable." He said he asked assignment of the same agents who investigated Louisiana and Florida State administrations and was "satisfied" with the Justice Department response.

Gillette would not say what candidates were involved in the Senate committee's investigation of the recent Nebraska primaries. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, was defeated by New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey in that State's Republican Presidential primaries while President Roosevelt was unopposed in its Democratic primaries.

Gillette said only: "The committee is sending investigators into Nebraska for the purpose of inquiring into expenditures of money in connection with that State's recent primary. Particular reference will be made to the Presidential campaigns."

Estimates Reported

Meanwhile, in Omaha, Nebr., the treasurer of Vandenberg's State campaign reported to election commissioners that the Michigan Senator's Nebraska campaign cost $17,901. In Lincoln, the State manager of the campaign for Dewey said the New York district attorney's campaign there cost about the same amount or slightly less. Expenditures for Dewey thus far in Ne-

5 Arrested In Club Fire Fatal to 198

Drunken Men Were Overheard Threatening to Set Dance Hall Afire

By the Associated Press

Natchez, Miss., April 24.—The possibility that a dance hall fire which claimed the lives of 198 colored persons was deliberately set developed tonight with the arrest of five suspects.

Police Chief Joe Serio said the arrests were based on a statement that several drunken colored men were overheard threatening to set the building on fire.

Earlier, Sheriff Hyde Jenkins said all indications pointed to accidental start of the blaze.

More Deaths Expected

Dr. Andrew Hedmeg, county health officer, said an official count tonight showed 198 dead. The fatalities had been reported as high as 253 late today but the larger number was ascribed to confusion arising from swapping of bodies among undertaking establishments.

Two score or more suffered injuries and several additional deaths were expected.

Some 300 members and friends of the Moneywasters Social Club were jammed into the converted blacksmith shop, dancing to the music of Walter Barnes' Chicago Orchestra, when fire broke out near the single door at the front of the building.

Windows Boarded Up

A handful of dancers battled their way through the narrow door or wormed through the ticket seller's window nearby. The rest were driven toward the rear of the building, blinded by smoke and cruelly herded by flames that crackled with terrifying swiftness through masses of dry Spanish moss festooned from rafters some 14 feet above the floor.

The stampede swept back around the bandstand, beat futilely against the windows, which had been securely boarded up to bar "gatecrashers." One rear window's boards gave way and a few struggled out this way.

The remainder died screaming and clawing for escape, falling in piles that mounted shoulder high.

Most of Dead Suffocated

A scant 15 minutes later the fire had been brought under control and firemen fought their way in. Moans came from beneath some of the mounds of scorched bodies and those who still lived were brought out. Twenty of these pitifully burned and battered victims died en route to hospitals.

Equestrienne Hurt Seriously as Head Strikes Tree

A 30-year-old Washington equestrienne was seriously injured last night when her head struck a tree as she galloped along the Rock Creek Park bridle path with two companions.

The woman, Mrs. Dorothy Brooke, of 3710 Jenifer street northwest, was taken to Walter Reed Hospital, where she was found to be suffering from a fractured skull. Police said that Alexander B. Cecil and Warren McKenney, both of Arlington, Va., were riding alongside when the accident occurred, about three-quarters of a mile south of Cherrill drive northwest.

According to the story told police by the two men, the three were galloping along the path. At a point where the path was split by a tree, the horse veered and Mrs. Brooke's head struck the tree, hurling her from the mount.

6,000 Cab Men Strike in New York

New York, April 24 (U.P.).—The Transport Workers Union today called a strike of 6,000 taxi drivers and maintenance workers employed by the Parmelee System and the Terminal System.

The strike was called at 2 p. m. effective immediately in an attempt to obtain a 45 per cent commission rate for drivers during the 1940 World's Fair, the rate which prevailed during the fair last year. The normal rate is 42½ per cent.

Unwelcome Guest Blamed in D. C. Apartment Fire

Evidence that an acquaintance who was denied admittance to the rooms of a resident in the Oakland Apartment, 2006 Columbia road northwest, set fire to the place "to get even," was being studied by detectives last night.

A photograph of the suspected firebug was identified by several residents of the building as that of the man whom they excluded from their rooms a short time before the fire was found.

Detectives said they were able to prove the man was on the scene 20 minutes before apparatus arrived and at that time was overheard making a remark about "smoking 'em out."

With the new evidence, detectives paid little heed yesterday to their first theory that the fire was started by a discharged employe.

The fire broke out in two parts of the building Sunday night, routing more than 100 residents.

One man was overcome by dense smoke which issued from the basement and from two chairs in the lobby, filling the building. Slight damage was found after the smoke cleared away.

American Refugees Reach Stockholm After Perilous, 12-Day Trek Through Deep Snow by Auto, Truck, Sled and Afoot

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 24.—Ending a 12-day struggle through German air raids and the deep snows of Norwegian mountains by car, truck, sled and afoot, a party of American war-zone refugees from the United States Legation in German-occupied Oslo arrived here today.

The party was in charge of the United States Naval Attache at Oslo, Lieut. Commander Ole O. Hagen.

Before starting to safety with the party of men, women and children, the attache had obtained a promise from the Germans not to bomb Sjosjoen, where the women were quartered, until after they had left.

However, the party encountered numerous air raids along the route and once took shelter in the same railway tunnel at Dombas, Norwegian railway junction point, in which Capt. Robert M. Losey, 31, Assistant Military Attache at Stockholm, was killed the next day, Sunday, during a German air raid.

The officer's body is expected here tomorrow.

Deciding to move the party on April 12, Lieut. Commander Hagen left Oslo by a car obtained through the police with a consulate clerk as the driver.

An account of his struggle was told in a prosaically-titled "Bulletin No. Four," issued by Frederick A. Sterling, United States Minister to Sweden.

With a pass through the lines and six United States flags, the party started from Oslo at 1 p. m., but was forced to return and make a detour because of a broken bridge.

Three hours later the caravan was ditched in 5 feet of snow.

Nine Norwegians finally rescued the refugees at 11 p. m., and they spent the night at a hotel in Haga, a small town about 30 miles northeast of Oslo.

The next day, April 13, the party made fairly good time, reaching Ringsaker, about 60 miles north of Haga, before being halted by a wrecked bridge.

There the refugees abandoned their cars and walked two hours, carrying suitcases and two United

Norse King Rules Out Deal With Germans

Will Not Negotiate Unless Nazis Leave Country, He Says

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 14.—King Haakon, of Norway, proclaimed from his secret headquarters tonight that "there is no basis for negotiation" between the Norwegian government and Nazi Germany.

The King likewise refused to recognize the new administrative council set up in German-held Oslo.

Letter to Head of Court

His proclamation took the form of a letter addressed to Paal Berg, president of the Norwegian Supreme Court, who authorized the administrative council for the German-occupied district. It was distributed by the Norwegian Telegraphic Agency.

"I naturally agree that the people in districts occupied by Germany must behave in an orderly manner, but neither I nor the Crown Prince can be expected to urge these people to obey German authorities," the King said.

"The Norwegian government cannot negotiate on any other basis than that German troops be removed from the country.

"No Basis for Negotiations"

"There is no basis for negotiations, since the Germans hold to their claims of April 9. These claims are of such form that no change is possible."

King Haakon contended that the authority being exercised by the administrative council in the Oslo district depends upon force and is not being exercised on behalf of the Norwegian government.

The administrative council can be considered only as an assistant organization to the German administration, the King declared.

Stockholm, April 24.—Countering persistent Allied reports of German intentions to invade Sweden, German quarters here said tonight Berlin hoped Sweden could remain neutral so her economy could escape the ravages of war—a point in Germany's interest as well as Sweden's.

With this conviction, authoritative neutral opinion here fully agrees. It was said that if Sweden remains neutral, Germany will receive this summer from Swedish Baltic ports a considerable portion of her normal supply of iron ore, while if Sweden were at war this traffic would be entirely cut off.

"The Netherlands' minister has been authorized to state that Mr Frazier Hunt had no interview with any high responsible Netherlands official and that his statement to the effect that the Netherlands blamed the Indies issue on the British and called the agitation over Japan an attempt to get the United States into war in no way represents the views of the Netherlands' government."

Communists Rule Ship Radio Union, Dies Witness Says

Charging that there are 150 Communists in the radio rooms of American ships, a Dies Committee witness asserted yesterday that the C. I. O.'s American Communication Association was under "99 per cent" Communist control, and that Mervyn Rathborne, its president, is a Communist.

One of the ships with a Communist radio operator, he said, is former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies' yacht, Sea Cloud.

The witness, Fred H. Howe, testified that he had been ousted by an A. C. A. "goon squad" last year from his post as secretary of a marine radio union local.

Howe's allegation that the A. C. A. is under Communist domination brought an immediate denial from Rathborne, whom President Roosevelt last year appointed an adviser to the National Youth Administration.

In a statement issued in New York, Rathborne asserted that Howe had been expelled from the A. C. A. "after having been tried and found guilty of being an agent of the employers." The Dies Committee, Rathborne added, "clearly shows its union-busting hand once again" in providing a "public platform from which the vilest slander can be broadcast" against workers who be-

Narvik Battle Renewed

By Elmer W. Peterson.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm (Thursday), April 25.—Blasted out of ruined Steinkjer, the British column north of Trondheim last night fell back 6 miles before German infantry, artillery and air attacks and dug into strong fortifications which it still holds with the battle raging into its third day.

At the same time a swift German flanking force was proceeding up the Glomma River in eastern Norway, near the Swedish border, pressing on the town of Roros. Airplanes with this force bombed a Norwegian troop train carrying 165 soldiers with disastrous results at a point north of Tynset, which the Germans occupied.

Tynset is 115 miles southeast of Trondheim. Roros is 45 miles north of Tynset and about 100 miles south of Steinkjer, on a straight line.

A Triple Threat

This German force, besides presenting a sharp threat to the Allied left flank in the Lillehammer section, well to their southwest about 90 miles above Oslo, had two other possible aims. Success in either would seriously affect the Allied situation.

The force could strike west from Roros to the vicinity of Storen, on the main railroad leading south from Trondheim, and there could cut off the Allied forces last reported within 20 miles of Trondheim on the south.

Or by striking directly north, the column could strengthen the German forces at Steinkjer.

The occupation of Roros was expected momentarily.

Casualties Believed Considerable

The Norwegian troop train was bombed 6 miles north of Tynset. The number of casualties was not immediately available but it must have been considerable since advices reaching here said that only the locomotive and one car of the entire train were left intact.

Preceding the bombardment, machine-gunning Nazi planes sped on to Roros, swooping low over the town with their guns chattering full blast. Two persons were wounded before the panic-stricken populace could reach cover.

Early today British bombers launched an attack on the Agdenes Fortress at the mouth of Trondheim Fjord and ran into the fire

DEBUNKING THE CAPITAL

ALICE'S QUIP: Stimulated by all the third-term talk, Alice Longworth, the Princess Royal, has got off another gem which her Republican friends are quoting with delight:

Harlan Miller

She says the initials FDR stand for Fuehrer, Duce, Rex. Other GOP wits are chagrined that they didn't think of it first.

* * * *

As Teddy's enchanting daughter, she isn't awed by Presidents. She once described Warren Harding as a "big slob." Another time she somewhat under-estimated Franklin Roosevelt by saying that he is "one-third mush, two-thirds Eleanor."

FIGHTING WORDS? Into the speech of a high Government official, prepared for delivery this week, inadvertently popped the phrase "ports of embarkation." It reared its ugly head in a sentence referring to movements of troops and war supplies. His hair almost on end, he quickly blue-penciled it, after it had cleared the White House. He had been thinking of 1917, not 1940. What a storm it would have caused, here and in Berlin!

SUB FOR GOATS: Frustrated by objections to the use of goats, the secret Army-Navy committee on Capitol Hill didn't know how to test the new Barlow super-explosive, glamite. At length the tension was broken by a semi-serious suggestion from silver-haired Senator Gillette of Iowa.

"Why not use Republicans instead of goats?"

"—explode a few Republicans"

Some Democratic members were inclined to take the suggestion seriously when a Republican Congressman offered an amendment.

"That's okay with me," said he, "provided you tether some of the Republican candidates who are running against Republican incumbents."

HE'D FIGHT NOW: Lord Bertrand Russell, the British philosopher who was recently barred from teaching in New York by an Irish judge, has changed his mind about pacifism. He spent part of the last war in prison as a conscientious objector. Now he tells friends that if he were younger he'd enlist to fight Hitlerism!

FDR FANTASY: The Capital is always awash with fantastic tales, but never quite so much so as when the Republic's editors gather here for their annual pow-wow and off-the-record chat with the President. For their delectation the juiciest ones are ricocheted across the lobbies. Last week-end a prime example was the one about the tapped phone call from Mussolini.

It illustrates the wide belief that all trans-Atlantic calls are tapped. Mussolini, so the story goes, phoned his good friend Morgan-partner Lamont to let off some steam about Roosevelt, who exasperates Benito occasionally. He paid his compliments to FDR without much restraint.

* * * *

Ten minutes after Benito hung up, Roosevelt phoned Lamont from the White House just to tell him that he knew what Benito had said.

It's a grand yarn, but I don't believe it. Yet sometimes it's as important to know the preposterous stories that are afloat as the true ones. They're a clue to a state of mind.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Harry Hopkins' friends say he has gained 26 pounds from his low . . . But his foes say that isn't heavy enough yet to make him a delegate-at-large from Iowa, as FDR would like . . . About 4 out of 5 women who see Willkie closeup are ready to vote for him for President; like Dorothy Thompson, they're pushovers for the tousled hair falling over the bold brow.

3 Utilities Challenge Death Sentence

Holding Companies Also Contest Methods of SEC

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Rough sailing awaits efforts by the Securities and Exchange Commission to break up giant utility empires as required by the so-called "death sentence" provision of the 1935 Utility Holding Company Act.

This is the way available evidence pointed yesterday as three large holding companies challenged the constitutionality of the death sentence clause and one, in addition, contested the manner in which the SEC is going about the job.

At a hearing yesterday before the commission, the United Gas Improvement Co. argued that the SEC first should have drawn up a plan for breaking up its holdings and then held hearings on this definite proposal. William Clarke Mason, Philadelphia, attorney for the company, said that, as matters stand, the commission has ordered hearings on the general problem with a view to drafting a plan afterward.

9 Ordered to Show Cause

United Gas was one of nine holding companies ordered by the commission last February to show cause why utility properties controlled by them should not be rearranged according to the standards prescribed by the death sentence.

The death sentence, one of the most bitterly contested legislative proposals of modern times, directs the SEC to break up utility empires into single geographically integrated systems and to simplify their corporate structures.

United Gas Improvement, the $2,500,000,000 Electric Bond & Share Co., and the Engineers' Public Service Co., in replying to the SEC order, challenged the constitutionality of the provision.

Court Test Appears Inevitable

They argued, among other things, that it was not a proper regulation of commerce, that it would deprive them of property without due process of law, and that it was an unlawful delegation of legislative authority by Congress.

As a result, a court test of the death sentence appeared to be inevitable.

United Gas, at the hearing yesterday, characterized as a "legal deficiency" the SEC's method of forcing compliance.

United Gas and Engineers' Public Service are the only companies which have filed formal answers to the commission's order. The others have been given extensions of time.

Patman Bill To Kill Towns, Witness Charges

Passage of the Patman bill to impose graduated taxes on chain stores would restrict their operations to large cities, Carl Jungbluth of the American Pearl Button Co., Washington, Iowa, told a House committee yesterday, and "would kill many small towns and county seats."

He defended chains as a "natural development" and said they now were an "economic necessity" that had brought better quality and lower prices to consumers of all merchandise. He attacked the Patman bill as discriminatory, unfair and economically unsound.

Similar views regarding cooperation of chains in purchasing and retailing were expressed by witnesses representing rice, poultry, dairying and vegetable interests.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Jr., Leaves Hospital; Still Bedridden

Charlottesville, Va., April 24 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who was injured in a hunting accident last month, yesterday was discharged from University of Virginia Hospital and returned to her home on Fendall avenue.

Young Roosevelt, who is a student in the university's law school, said that his wife is "getting along fine," and although she is still confined to bed and has a part-time nurse with her, he hopes she will be up in several days.

The President's daughter-in-law received a fractured pelvis when her horse refused to take a jump and fell on her during a drag hunt with the Farmington Hunt Club.

Marine Corps, FBI Probe Shooting Of Quantico Sentry

Two investigations—one by a Marine Corps board and the other by the Federal Bureau of Investigation—were under way yesterday, following the shooting of a Marine sentry at Quantico by a suspected saboteur.

Private Henry W. Bushwitz, the wounded sentry, was reported to be in no danger. His discharge from the base hospital was expected in a few days. A bullet of small caliber was removed from his stomach.

Marine Corps officers revealed that Private Bushwitz managed to fire two shots at the prowler.

HODGES TERRY DEVERS SCOTT

2 Are Nominated As Major Generals 9 to Be Brigadiers

President Roosevelt nominated 11 officers yesterday for promotion to be major generals or brigadier generals, going far down the Army list to pick the youngest group chosen for high command in recent years.

The new brigadiers average 53 years old, compared with the normal procedure of promoting colonels in their late 50's. More than 550 senior colonels were jumped in the appointment of the first man on the advancement list—Col. Courtney H. Hodges—while the others were all well down the roster.

For major generals, Mr. Roosevelt named Brig. Gen. Campbell B. Hodges, military aide to President Hoover and now commander of the Fifth Division, and Brig. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commandant of the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Nominated for brigadier generals were:

Col. Hodges, Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga.; Col. Jacob L. Devers, Field Artillery, Panama Canal Zone; Col. Charles L. Scott, Cavalry, Boston, Mass.; Col. John N. Greely, Field Artillery, military attache to Spain. Col. Thomas A. Terry, Coast Artillery, Fort Winfield Scott, Calif.; Col. Simon B. Buckner, Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga.; Col. Charles H. Bonesteel, Infantry, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; Col. John H. Hester, Infantry, Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo.; Col. Edward P. King, jr., Field Artillery, and instructor at the Army War College here.

Col. Greely is a son of the late Maj. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, the Arctic explorer who died here last year. A native of Washington, he entered the Army in 1908 after graduating from Yale. During the World War he was assistant chief of staff of the A. E. F. He is 54.

Gen. Hodges, 59, was born in Bossier Parish, La., and was graduated from West Point in 1903. He was with the Thirty-first Division during the Meuse-Argonne offensive in 1918.

Gen. McNair is only 56, the youngest officer appointed to major general in recent years. He was born in Verndale, Minn., and was graduated from West Point in 1904. One of the first American officers to go to France in 1917, he served briefly with the First Division and during the remainder of the war was on duty at A. E. F. headquarters.

Col. Hodges, 53, was born at Perry, Ga. He had a year at West Point and then enlisted in the Army, being promoted to second lieutenant in 1909. He is an expert rifle shot and was cited for gallantry in action at St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne.

Col. Devers is a former graduate manager of athletics and mathematics instructor at West Point. He is 52 and a native of York, Pa.

Col. Scott is a noted horseman. During the World War, he was in charge of purchasing horses for the Army, and headed the 1932 American Olympic equestrian team. He is 52 and was born in Mount Pleasant, Ala.

Col. Terry, 54, is also an Alabaman. He was graduated from West Point in 1908. During the World War he served with the Fifth Coast Artillery in France.

Col. Buckner, 53, is the son of Lieut. Gen. Simon B. Buckner, of the Confederate Army. He was born in Munfordville, Ky., and was graduated from West Point in 1908. During the World War, he was in the Air Service.

Col. Bonesteel, 55, is the son and grandson of West Pointers and has a son in the service. He was born at Fort Sidney, Nebr. During the World War, he was with the Seventh Division in France.

Col. Hester, 53, was born in Albany, Ga., and was graduated from West Point in 1908. During the World War, he was with the War Department General Staff and the 330th Service Battalion in France.

Col. King, 55, is a native of Atlanta, Ga. He entered the Army from civil life in 1908 and is a graduate of the Army and Naval War colleges.

braska totaled about $14,750, he said.

In Wisconsin, where Vandenberg also fought a losing primary battle for delegates with Dewey, the Vandenberg-for-President club told the secretary of state at Madison that it spent $16,194. Wisconsin's Dewey-for-President club previously had reported expenditure there of $25,884.

Staffing his investigating committee for ever-expanding campaign inquiries, Gillette announced appointment of James McNally as committee secretary and said a special subcommittee is considering appointment of a counsel. Gillette said assignment of investigators is being made from a list of 40 to 50 qualified applicants.

Other political developments:

Senate Majority Leader Barkley remained silent on the "Barkley for President" announcement Tuesday by his Kentucky colleague, Senator A. B. "Happy" Chandler.

But another New Deal Senator, Mead (Democrat), of New York, urged Barkley's nomination on a combination Democratic ticket headed by either President Roosevelt or Postmaster General Farley.

Senator Barkley would be a tower of strength on a ticket with either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Farley," said Mead. "As the keynoter at two conventions, advocate of liberal legislation, and the majority leader who has propelled the President's program through the Senate, he should have serious convention attention."

In Coronado, Calif., Representative Plumley (Republican), of Vermont, called House Minority Leader Martin the "real dark horse" for the Republican Presidential nomination.

In LaCrosse, Wis., the three primary-elected Garner delegates met apart from the 21 pledged to the President and voted to stand by Garner at the Democratic convention until released by the Vice President.

At the Capitol, Senator Gillette said he had received no reports from Senate committee investigators sent to Maryland to investigate campaign spending in the Democratic senatorial primary campaign. Howard Bruce is opposing renomination of Senator Radcliffe. Gillette said his investigators' report this week-end should determine whether further inquiry is justified.

Senator Neely meanwhile declared that it was at his request that the committee assigned investigators to West Virginia, where a four-cornered battle is in progress for the Democratic senatorial nomination and Neely is sharply contesting the gubernatorial nomination.

Allied to Holt

Following a split with the State machine, Neely recently made peace with Senator Rush D. Holt, who is up for reelection, and the two jointly are attacking the State machine.

Opposing Senator Holt for the Senate Democratic nomination are former Gov. Herman Guy Kump, friendly with the State administration of Gov. Homer A. Holt (no relation to the Senator), and two other candidates—Judge Harley Kilgore and J. Buhl Shahal.

Neely, who is not up for reelection until 1942, recently decided to fight it out this year with the unfriendly State administration, and announced for the governorship in the coming elections against Carl Andrews, who has statehouse backing. The Senator will open his campaign for the governorship with a speech in Charleston, W. Va., Thursday night.

Thus Senators Neely and Holt, ancient feudists, find the West Virginia statehouse this year their common foe, and are burying personal differences.

McNutt Urges U. S. Intensify Trade Efforts

Determined Drive To Increase Business In West Is Advocated

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 24.—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, urged tonight that America "make a substantial and determined drive to establish firmly trade relations with South and Central America and Mexico."

In an address prepared for delivery before a world trade dinner, McNutt declared that "by demonstrating to Europe we can obtain trade advantages by peaceable means, we may demonstrate the folly of attempting to do it by force of arms."

The former Indiana Governor, avowed candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination if President Roosevelt does not seek a third term, told the audience of industrialists that "we are determined not to get into it (war), but we might as well recognize that we cannot avoid its impact with our ways of living and with our business, both foreign and domestic."

"Foreign trade comes under the domination of governments at war," he said. "Markets are controlled not only against the enemy, but also against neutral countries.

"After the war these tendencies will also be strong. If Germany were to win the war, we could anticipate a strong effort to unify the economic systems of Europe and subordinate them to the economy of Germany.

"If the Allies win, these tendencies are not likely to disappear completely. The war has necessitated a virtual pooling of the resources of France and Britain. This coordination is quite likely to continue . . . after the war."

Observing "these tendencies . . . raise fundamental issues for the United States," McNutt declared "we have not set up and have not tried to set up closed trading areas in this hemisphere. Our exporters make strenuous efforts to sell to South and North America but they do not attempt to impose a regime of military and political force to achieve those aims."

Pressman Assails Walter-Logan Bill

The Walter-Logan bill, providing for court review of all rules and regulations issued by Federal administrative agencies, would "double the load of the people seeking justice" from Government bureaus, according to Lee Pressman, C. I. O. legislative counsel.

Pressman, speaking last night before the Washington Newspaper Guild in the District Building, charged Representative Francis E. Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, sponsor of the bill, with "aiming to please the Bethlehem Steel Corporation." Pressman also called for labor unity in fighting off attacks on the Wagner and Wage-Hour Acts.

Wallace, Black to Be Questioned

630,000 persons in the coming November elections."

Another member said the committee "wants to know just how Black and Wallace got around" statutes forbidding Federal officials to attempt to influence legislation through messages printed and mailed at Government expense.

A second point to be taken up with the two Agriculture officials, according to committee members, is a charge that AAA committeemen in the Middle West have been called to special meetings to receive "instructions" on the Jones bill.

No Agreement on Bill

The Black-Wallace letter is understood to have occupied the entire time of the committee at yesterday's executive session, with no agreement on the Jones bill or any substitute farm credit legislation expected for at least another week.

Meanwhile, FOA officials said yesterday that the agency would lose an important source of income if Congress decides to return to the Treasury $315,000,000 of the administration's investment, as suggested by President Roosevelt Monday in a letter to Vice President Garner.

Although the agency's ability to provide farm credit would not immediately be affected, fear was expressed that reserves against losses would shrink to where Congress might be required to vote additional funds to meet deficits.

135 Indicted In Detroit RacketCleanup

Former Mayor, Wayne Prosecutor, Policemen Named

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 24.—The grand jury investigating graft and gambling in Detroit today charged Richard W. Reading, mayor in 1938 and 1939, with conspiring to protect the policy house racket, estimated to have done a $10,000,000 annual business here for many years.

Accused with Reading were Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne County prosecutor; Fred W. Frahm, recently deposed as police superintendent; Harry Colburn, McCrea's chief investigator, and 88 present or former members of the police department.

Ten lieutenants and 34 sergeants were named by the grand jury. As a result some precincts were left with only one or two officers.

Police Commissioner Frank D. Eaman indicated temporary assignments would be made. "We have a feeling that more indictments are to come," remarked Eaman. "We cannot reorganize the department until that happens."

Reading said upon appearing for arraignment that the action against him is "a lot of nonsense."

He stood mute upon arraignment before Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, who returned the indictments as a one-man grand jury and sits as examining magistrate. A plea of innocent was entered and examination set for May 4.

Besides the public officials named in the warrant 43 persons accused of racketeering in the numbers game were listed. Among them was John Roxborough, comanager of world heavyweight champion Joe Louis.

New Methodist Church Opens Conference

Bishop Hughes Presides; Pageantry Marks Services

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., April 24.—After a solemn and impressive communion service opening the first general conference of the new Methodist Church, 776 delegates from all parts of the world divided into eight committees today and proceeded to sift numerous proposals for changes in the church organization.

They attended a "Methodist Advance" meeting tonight in the giant municipal auditorium, presided over by Senior Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington.

It was the first general conference since 7,856,000 members of the Methodist Protestant Church and the two Methodist Episcopal churches cast aside their century-old estrangement and merged into a single organization at Kansas City a year ago. And its opening service was one of the most spectacular bits of pageantry ever witnessed in this resort city famed for its conventions.

Ark Builder's Dream Hits A Legal Snag

By the Associated Press

Seattle, April 24.—A father's dream of finding a better life in the Alaskan wilderness for his wife and seven children ended in tears and his arrest tonight.

Only the mother and a 4-year-old daughter remained aboard the crude, home-made ark in which the family had attempted a dangerous, 2,000-mile voyage to the Northland.

Fighting to the last to hold his family together, courageous Paul Satko was taken into custody on charges of resisting an officer. Six policemen and a policewoman boarded the 40-foot vessel to serve a juvenile court order for custody of the children, ranging in age from 2½ to 18.

Frightened and crying, the young ones scurried into hiding places. One of them, 4-year-old Betty, became so hysterical that authorities left her with her mother. The others were taken to the juvenile home.

Police acted on an order issued by Superior Judge William G. Long, head of the County Juvenile Court. He had been petitioned by Capt. John M. Fox, secretary of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association, to demand custody of the children on the contention the boat was unsafe.

Waterfront observers said the wobbly Satko boat would not stand up during such a voyage.

Satko and his family came west from Richmond, Va., towing their partly-completely boat by automobile. They finished the craft at nearby Tacoma and a curious crowd of thousands saw them off. All in all, it took three years for the unemployed welder to build the boat. Satko planned to homestead 160 acres at Cook Inlet, Alaska.

Arrest Angers Citizens

Tacoma, April 24 (AP).—Tacoma citizens, angry at the arrest in Seattle today of Paul Satko, their adopted modern Columbus from Virginia, hastily organized a defense committee tonight.

The arrest of Personable Satko, 49, and the detaining of his children for juvenile authorities, was termed as a "terrible thing."

The defense committee, including Mayor-elect Harry Cain and Frank Gillihan, president of the Young Business Men's Club, said a legal staff would be on the Seattle scene the first thing in the morning.

War Games Shut to Foreign Military Men

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Army officials said yesterday that foreign military attaches will not be invited to observe the war games to be held in Louisiana and Texas next month—the largest military maneuvers held in this country.

"Lack of accommodations" was the reason given for ruling out the foreign observers. Many National Guard and Reserve officers are planning to be present, as well as members of Congress. Normally an invitation is extended to the attaches, although they also were excluded from the recent joint Army-Navy maneuvers in California.

In another defense development, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, proposed that Army and Navy officers be barred from speaking publicly on "important public issues" unless specifically authorized to do so by the Secretary of War or Navy.

Clark said he would introduce such legislation shortly after he urged that court-martial proceedings be instituted against Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig for his testimony before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee Monday that war with Japan was inevitable. He termed Taussig's utterances "a perfectly outrageous, indefensible exhibition of militarism."

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said after Taussig testified that his views were contrary to those of the Navy Department.

In another defense development, the Navy called for bids on materials from which nets might be fabricated to be stretched across American harbors as a protection against submarines, torpedoes and mines in case of war. Funds are not now available for construction of nets, since the $20,000,000 asked for the purpose was stricken out of the Navy appropriation bill by a House committee, and subsequent efforts to obtain even $8,000,000 for the program have not been successful.

Weather Data Found 10 Miles Up

United States Wather Bureau experts described yesterday how the upper air, 10 to 20 miles above the earth's surface, is gradually yielding its mysteries to science, making forecasting more accurate.

Led by Commander Francis W. Reichelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau and president of the American Meteorological Society, five of the Federal agency's scientists appeared at the society's spring meeting to outline progress during the past year.

The winter just past was the first in which the radiometeorograph and the isentropic chart were employed routinely in forecasting rather than experimentally, and they came through with flying colors, the society was told by Harry Wexler.

Records Conditions

The radiometeorograph is an instrument which, sent from 10 to 20 miles aloft in a balloon, records conditions of the upper air and broadcasts them to ground observers. From the data which it collects is made up the isentropic chart, which reveals the altitude, composition and drift of "cold air mountains" floating through the skies.

The session, held in the North Interior Building auditorium, and concluded last night with a banquet at Washington Golf and Country Club, was one of several being held here this week and next.

The American Geophysical Union opened a four-day scientific assembly yesterday. At 9:30 a. m. today the American Physical Society will open a three-day session at the Bureau of Standards.

Tomorrow the International Scientific Radio Union and Institute of Radio Engineers will hold a joint meeting at the National Academy of Sciences. The same bureau will be host to the Acoustical Society of America on Monday and Tuesday.

Meantime the National Academy of Sciences, whose spring meeting ended Tuesday night, announced yesterday the results of elections. The 15 scientists admitted to membership are:

Rollin Thomas Chamberlain and William Hay Taliaferro, University of Chicago; Wendell Mitchell Latimer and Karl Friederich Meyer, University of California; Carl Ferdinand Cori, Washington University, St. Louis; George Washington Corner, University of Rochester; Louis Frederick Fieser, Harvard University; James Baumgardner Murphy and Richard Edwin Shope, Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research; Isidor Isaac Rabi, Columbia University.

Henderson Reelected

Also Stephen Walter Ranson, Northwestern University; William Jacob Robbins, New York Botanical Garden; Stephen Timoshenko, Stanford University; Ernest Glen Wever, Princeton University, and Claus Hugo Hermann Weyl, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J.

L. J. Henderson, of Harvard, was reelected foreign secretary for a four-year term. J. C. Hunsaker was elected treasurer and the following were named to the academy's council: S. A. Mitchell, W. Mansfield Clark and Oswald Veblen.

Newly-elected foreign associates are Bernardo A. Houssay, Buenos Aires; James P. Hill, London; Giuseppe Levi, University of Liege, and Sir Henry Dale, Hampstead, England.

Father Lyons did postgraduate work at Catholic University here. His present post is San Francisco.

Rev. Coughlin Aided Front, Court Is Told

Michigan Priest Named One Director Of Group, Witness Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—A "voluntary statement" made to the Federal Bureau of Investigation by John A. Viebrock, one of 16 men on trial for seditious conspiracy, today named the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich., radio priest, as having appointed one of the defendants a national director of the Christian Front.

In the statement, read into the Federal Court trial record, Vierbrock declared:

"I have known John F. Cassidy (a defendant) since 1926. During the last eight years I have kept company with his sister, Margaret. He was recognized as a national director of the Christian Front, to which he was appointed by Father Coughlin.

"In the summer of 1939, Cassidy merged all Brooklyn units of the Christian Front into one central organization. Before I became a member, the Christian Front started a sport club, which was chartered by the National Rifle Association. Its membership was about 150."

Viebrock's statement said William Gerald Bishop, leader of the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the Government by violence, proposed that the Sport Club be mobilized into squads and given military training "and that the squads be distributed throughout Brooklyn, so they could be mobilized if a state of alarm arose."

Christian Front leaders turned down Bishop's proposal, however, and early last October Bishop organized a group called the "Country Gentlemen," the statement continued.

The statement also asserted that Bishop had instructed him how to make cordite bombs—"not to kill, but just powerful enough to smash a window or blow in a door."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Alba Rosa Victor plays a violin recital Wednesday night in the Washington Club with Allison Sanderford at the piano. Program: Adagio from Concerto in D minor (Bruch), La Folia (Corelli-Leonard), Andantino in the Style of Padre Martini (Kreisler), German Dance (Dittersdorf), Pezzo all' Antica (Dina Rosa), Sarabande and Tambourin (Leclair), Three Spanish Dances (Sarasate), Scandinavian Lullaby (Thomson), Sextet from "Lucia di Lammermoor" (Donizetti-St. Lubin), Perpetual Motion (Ries).

Those who attended the violin recital by Alba Rosa Victor last evening in the Washington Club extended a cordial welcome to an accomplished artist who has become a permanent resident in the city. The poise of experience, as well as surety of technique, established confidence in her ability with her fine reading of the slow movement from Bruch's D minor concerto with which she opened her program. There was eloquence in the breadth and color of her tone, in its lyric quality and its just intonation, and dexterity in the phrasing.

BROWN

Technical ease became more apparent in Hubert Leonard's edition of Corelli's D minor sonata, known as "La Folia," which was performed with accentual precision and with the celerity of a practiced bow. The discrimination of her taste in the treatment of composers differing in manner was manifested in a group consisting of Kreisler's Andantino in the style of Padre Martini, a sturdy German dance by Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf, Dina Rosa's "Pezzo all' antica" and a sarabande and tambourin by Jean Marie Leclair.

Her warmth of temperament came to the fore in her dashing interpretation of three Spanish dances by Pablo Sarasate, particularly in the "Playera" and the "Romanza Andaluza." These had a fiery intenseness beneath the scintillant arabesques, and a contagious vitality. In her final group were combined a lullaby by Caesar Thomson, Leon de Saint-Lubin's difficult arrangement for violin alone of the sextet from "Lucia," and the "Perpetuum Mobile" of Ries.

Composers' Group of the League of American Pen Women present a concert Wednesday night in the Willard Hotel. Program of compositions by May Arno, Elizabeth Merz Butterfield, Iris Brussels, Bonita Crowe, Lula Jones Downing, Dorothy Radde Emery, Anna George, Katherine E. Lucke and Mary Pickens Opie.

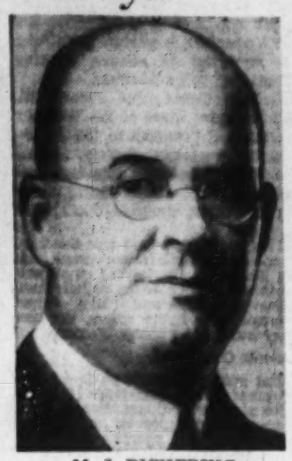
Reviewers who have divided their time between two concert halls in an evening pay the penalty of missing part of each program. Arriving late in the Willard Hotel, where the composer members of the League of American Pen Women were presenting examples of their work before an audience that filled the Bamboo Room, I was coincident with the performance of Anna George's "Silhouettes of the Southwest," four impressionistic piano pieces cleverly describing such disparate things as "Blue Distance," "The Wind," "Cactus Blooms" and "The Broncho."

Following these came a pleasantly tuneful vocal trio, "Gypsy Music," sung by Nellie Barber Brooks, Francise Bass Wilson and Laura Wentzel of the Lovette Choral Club, and a setting of Psalm CXXI, sung by David Manley, from the pen of Bonita Crowe. Katherine Fetrow Ames was the singer of four lyrics—"Violets," "June," "Tapestry" and "Nightingale"—by Lulu Jones Downing, who has a talent for the vocal line. The program closed with May Arno's arrangement of four Russian songs: "Troika," "Grichaniki" and "Birch in the Meadow."

Judging from the general level of these works, the league is fortunate in the possession of musical gifts. I could not but regret that I did not hear the capable Lovette Choral Club sing Dorothy Radde Emery's "The Fountain" and Elizabeth Merz Butterfield's "Spring." For the sake of the record be it said that the program contained Iris Brussels' "Moods" and the scherzo from a piano sonata, Mary Pickens Opie's vocal trios, "Lullaby" and "Hollyhocks," Lulu Jones Downing's "Oriental Group" and a suite for two violins and piano by Katherine E. Lucke.

First Folk Festival Matinee A Sell-Out, Director Says

SARAH GERTRUDE KNOTT



M. J. PICKERING

Ticket Distribution in Schools Credited To P.-T. A. Congress by Business Manager; Officials of Organization Are Commended

No more seats are available for the opening matinee program of the National Folk Festival this afternoon, festival leaders announced yesterday. Boxes, tiers and orchestra at Constitution Hall already are sold out.

"This public response to the festival is of course highly gratifying both to Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, the director, and to me," M. J. Pickering, festival business manager, said yesterday. "We only regret that we have had to turn away many school children, and others who had planned to attend the Thursday matinee."

The success of the ticket sale in the public schools is due in large part to the efforts of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, according to Maj. Pickering. He expressed his gratitude to Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the congress; to Mrs. C. D. Sinclair, who was chairman of the ticket committee, and to Miss Elizabeth Andrews, principal of Bancroft School, chairman of the public school committee.

Tickets for tonight's performance and for the remaining afternoon and evening shows of the three-day festival still are on sale at The Post. They also will be available at Constitution Hall before performances.

Permit Granted for 12-Story, $400,000 Hotel Addition

Permission to erect a 12-story addition to the Burlington Hotel at 1122-1124 Vermont avenue northwest, was granted yesterday by the Board of Zoning Adjustment. The board also approved 12 other petitions, denied three and deferred action on six.

Spokesmen for the Burlington Apartment House Co. said the new building would cost about $400,000 and be connected with the existing building by the first floor and lobby.

Five of the six applications deferred are for the establishment of gasoline service stations. The other case deferred is a petition by Henry Oxenburg to extend a proposed three-story apartment house at Thirty-third place and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. The board said it would be willing to grant the petition if the applicant would provide proper covenants stating no additional buildings would be erected on the site.

Bowling Alleys Planned

Three petitions for gasoline stations were denied, including one by Evalyn Walsh McLean, who sought permission for her tenant, Arthur Desendorf, to erect gasoline pumps at the parking lot on the north side of New York avenue northwest, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. Petitions for other proposed stations denied are Bladensburg road and Levis street northeast, and at Benning road and Twenty-fifth place northeast.

An appeal granted was that of Meyer Siegel, to establish bowling alleys on the east side of Alabama avenue, north of Pennsylvania avenue southeast. This petition must also be approved by the District Zoning Commission. The adjustment board stated, however, the applicant must provide for an additional entrance than had been planned and that the entrance not be placed on the alley side of the building.

Other appeals granted:

Mary Chilliemi, to change a nonconforming use from a bakery to a sporting goods shop at 001 Monroe street northeast.

Katherine V. Hopkins Wylie, to establish an automobile parking lot at 1450-1454 N street northwest. Applicant must provide a 5-foot wire fence, an attendant for the lot and no signs or lights.

Lavinia M. Engle, to change a nonconforming use from a grocery store to a delicatessen store at 601 Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Israel Finklestein, to change a nonconforming use from a grocery store to a cleaning and dyeing agency at 500 Twelfth street northeast. The board ruled that no Neon signs, boilers nor pressers at the establishment were to be installed.

Mrs. William R. Knobloch, to erect a rear one-story addition to 3417 Woodley road northwest.

Benjamin Ourisman, to permit construction of a third-story addition to building at 610 H street northeast.

Frank S. Phillips, to establish an educational institution on the north side of Watson street east of Conduit road northwest.

R. N. Manganan, to permit removal of front terrace and construction of a new front wall and two-story rear addition at 1410 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Washington Home for Incurables, to extend the permitted grocery store and parking lot at the southeast corner of Wisconsin avenue and Upton street northwest.

Fourth of U. S. Workers Toil In P. O. Bureau

Manual Laborers Make Up 23 Per Cent, Civil Service Finds

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The question "What Is a Government Worker?" gets a complete answer from the Civil Service Commission.

The commission's investigators have come up with the information that there are more "sweat-of-the-brow" workers in the Federal service than clerks—a fact overlooking Post Office clerks and letter carriers.

These postal workers, a new study shows, are the largest occupational group in the Government service, about 28 per cent of the total. Aside from this group, the clerks make up 18 per cent of all the workers, while manual laborers, a group which includes everything from boilermaker to seamstress, add up to 23 per cent.

Economists Outnumbered

The study uncovers other curious twists about the Government's operating staff. It says that the professional engineers employed by the Government outnumber the economists almost two to one. Professional statisticians and mathematicians have a slight edge over professional publicity men, classed as editorial and informational occupations. The latter group is about the same size as librarians, therapeutic workers, and chippers and caulkers.

Figures used in the survey are based on a 25 per cent sample of the Federal employment rolls. The sample was taken last September, while the statistics have just been completed. They cover an estimated 808,000 Government workers.

Starting from this figure, the study fixes 185,000 as the total of Government employes in trade and manual occupations, more than half of them skilled workers.

Hunters on List

Included in the list of semiskilled workers are 2550 hunters, trappers and guides, 550 deckhands and sailors, 550 laundry workers, 755 munitions and chemical workers, and 2,600 chainmen and rodmen. The study shows 44,000 unskilled workers.

Other occupational groups, and their total employes, include:

Technical, scientific and professional, 89,000; semitechnical, semiscientific and semiprofessional, 37,000; managerial and official occupations, 85,000; postoffice clerks and carriers, 209,000; other clerical occupations, 147,000, and service occupations, 56,000.

Between 400 and 500 employes of the General Accounting Office are facing a furlough before the end of June as a result of $625,000 cut in emergency funds for the agency.

The cut was made by the Budget Bureau in the estimates for the 1941 relief appropriations act, and officials are doubtful that it will be restored by the House Appropriations Committee, now studying the measure.

Furloughs would be made in the staff of 2,900 emergency workers, paid with relief funds.

'Grapes of Wrath' Conditions Spreading, Trust Inquiry Told

Mechanization of American farmland is spreading the problems highlighted in "The Grapes of Wrath" across the entire country, the Monopoly Committee heard yesterday.

Dr. Paul Taylor, member of the California Department of Agriculture, and former field director of rural rehabilitation in that State, told the committee that California faces the migrant farm worker problem "in its most acute form—but similar situations are developing everywhere in the United States."

The witness expressed fears that technological change, forcing continual consolidations of land ownership, threatens the existence of the one-family, owner-operated farm and, with it, "the farm as a way of life."

McCormick Tells of New Leisure

Dr. Taylor came to the stand after Fowler McCormick, vice president of the International Harvester Co., had asserted that mechanical developments are steadily benefiting the family-size farm and "may well become a bulwark to preserve this important part of our social structure."

McCormick argued that growing use of the one-plow tractor and other mechanical equipment has brought new leisure to thousands in rural America.

McCormick pointed out that the Federal Government, through the Rural Electrification Administration, "is itself concerned to extend mechanization on the farm by making available a new source of power."

Taylor contended that the new farm machinery, rather than shortening the farmer's working day, tends to increase the land holdings of the farmer who can afford to purchase mechanical equipment.

Depend on Mobile Workers

"Once the machinery is there," the Californina professor said, "the farmer feels the pressure to cut down on overhead by using the machinery to its fullest capacity. He wants to get more land and keeps on working the same long hours.

"When mechanization achieves success in planting and cultivating, but not in harvesting a crop, agricultural employers must then depend for the harvest upon hordes of under-employed, mobile laborers," he said. "This stratification upon the land is accompanied by bitter strife."

Taylor cited "half-articulate appeals from distressed and fearful farmers against 'land monopoly,' 'land hogs' and 'tractoring out.'

"On one side we see vague efforts to curb expansion of farms," he said, while "also we hear talk of placing limits on the right of suffrage of those who are victims of mechanization in agriculture."

Quotes Webster

He quoted Daniel Webster:

"Universal suffrage . . . could not long exist in a community where there was great inequality of property. The holders of estates would be obliged in such case either to restrain the right of suffrage, or else such right of suffrage would ere long divide the property."

Taylor proposed that the Federal Government check conversion of small farmers into migrant farm laborers by including all farms with two or more hired laborers in the social security program, increasing funds available for rural rehabilitation loans, guaranteeing private loans to enable "working farmers" to stay on the land. He said the cooperative farm is "a way of holding farmers on the land that deserves more attention."

Labor Union Conspiracy Trial Opens

Howat, President Of Concrete Company, Is First Witness

Difficulties of the Howat Concrete Co., 2 S street southwest, when it was caught "in the middle" of a jurisdictional dispute between two A. F. L. unions, were described in the District Court yesterday by P. Y. K. Howat, president of the company.

Howat was the first witness called by Government counsel prosecuting the Washington local of the teamsters union and five union officials for conspiracy to restrain trade.

Howat testified that a strike was called on his work at the Jefferson Memorial but not at the Mellon Art Gallery.

Walter R. Hutchinson, special assistant attorney general, told the court the teamsters used strikes, violence and threats to compel District employers to hire their members, instead of members of the Operating Engineers' local, to drive cement mixer delivery trucks. These efforts, said Hutchinson, were violations of the antitrust laws, which forbid combinations in restraint of trade.

Claims Wage Disputes

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the A. F. L., denied that strikes were called over the jurisdictional issue alone, saying he would prove that controversies over wages, hours and other legitimate labor questions existed at the same time. One cause of the strikes, said Padway, was a dispute over contracts for drivers of dump trucks.

During selection of the jury, Padway asked each prospective juror whether he would condemn a strike over a jurisdictional question alone.

Edwin L. Davis, a building contractor, 4616 Thirtieth street northwest, was excused from jury duty when he said:

"I'm afraid I'd be prejudiced."

Padway challenged Francis A. Murray, real estate man, 4960 Hillbroke lane northwest, who said:

"I am opposed to strikes unless there is a reason. I am opposed to sit-down strikes.

First Trial of Kind

This is the first time a labor union has been criminally prosecuted here on antitrust law violation charges. Justice Peyton Gordon several weeks ago rejected the union's claim that the law exempts labor organizations from prosecution under the antitrust acts.

This question may be raised again for decision by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, who is presiding over the current trial, in connection with a motion to instruct the jury to acquit the defendants without hearing their defense.

Besides the union, formally known as Local 639, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the defendants are Charles J. Bell, president; Stuart M. Keyser, recording secretary; Linwood A. Trainhim, secretary-treasurer; Aubrey Z. Stream, business agent, and Thomas O'Brien, of Philadelphia, business agent of the international union.

List of Jurors

The jurors are:

Noel T. Compton, barber, 3021 Eleventh street northwest; Donald J. Cronan, reviewer, 1324 Fort Stevens drive northwest; Clarence V. Niedomanski, General Electric Supply Co., salesman, 5527 Third place northwest; John R. Magill, stenographer, 823 Buchanan street northwest;

Wesley H. Loving, credit man, Palais Royal, 1340 East Capitol street; William K. Norwood, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. employe, 3231 Patterson street northwest; John W. Ebert, cashier, 641 Sixth street southeast; James H. Ellis, night foreman, Gongress Laundry, 2230 Nicholson street southeast;

Claude B. Fenton, salesman, 5427 Thirteenth street northwest; George R. Gallagher, note teller, Lincoln Bank, 5519 Ninth street; John F. Lancaster, sr., colored, Government bundle wrapper, 25 Ninth street northeast; John H. Long, Government laborer, 2124 Eighth street northwest.

The alternates are Leon K. Ristig, unemployed, 1610 Girard street northeast, and Williiam L. Wheeler, painter, 125 Sixth street southeast.

C. H. Cleaves, 89, Dies of Injuries Suffered in Fall

A native of Biddeford, Md., Mr. Cleaves went West as a young man. He was aboard the first train that entered Oklahoma when the territory was opened to homesteaders. He made his home at Winfield, Kans., until 12 years ago when he came here to live with a daughter, Miss Florena Cleaves. Mr. Cleaves was a member of the Masonic order and an Odd Fellow.

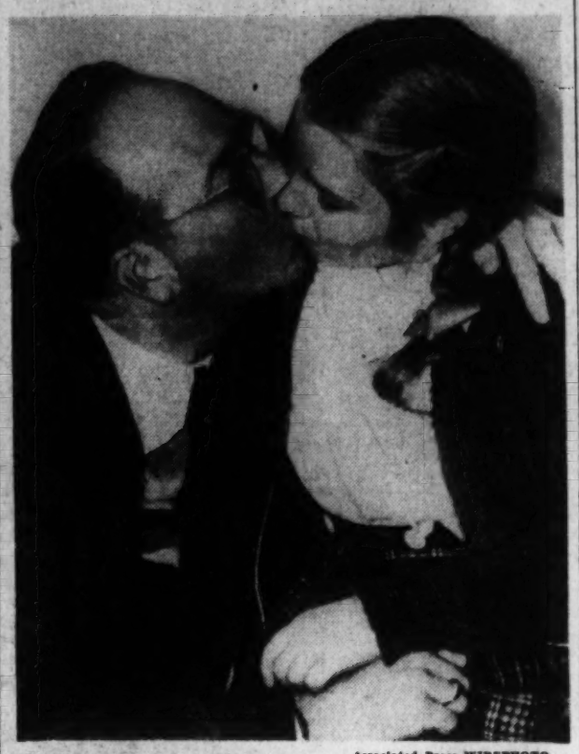
Chloe Davis Tearfully Tells How Her Mother Ran Amok



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Chloe Davis, 11, who saw her mother kill her two sisters and brother and then die by her own hand, yesterday was given into the custody of her father, Barton Davis. They sealed it with a kiss. Chloe, however, will remain a ward of the Los Angeles juvenile court for one year

Frightened, Shocked Girl Becomes Ward Of Juvenile Court, But Is Released In Father's Care by Judge's Order

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 24.—Frightened and tearful, 11-year-old Chloe Davis told again today of the tragedy that took the lives of her mother, her two sisters and her baby brother, then became a ward of the juvenile court for a year. She was released immediately, however, to her father.

Judge W. Turney Fox held the child had no abnormal tendencies, ruling that her unusual behavior while her mother hammered to death the three small children and then committed suicide, was due to the mother's domination.

Chloe amazed officers and friends with her dry-eyed, matter-of-fact recital April 4 of Mrs. Lolita Davis' attack upon the children—Daphne, 10; Deborah, 7, and Mark, 3—and upon Chloe herself. She said she wrested a hammer from her mother and, at Mrs. Davis' request, beat the parent and also little Mark. A coroner's jury decided Mark died from his mother's blows—not Chloe's—and that Mrs. Davis died after slashing her own wrists.

It was the first time that Chloe—publicly at least—had given way to tears. Her voice barely audible, she had to stop several times as the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"I heard screams . . . I think it was Daphne . . . Well, I went out into the hall and mama hit me on the head . . . I wrestled with her for the hammer . . . Then she tried to set my hair on fire . . ."

Then she told of beating Mark and her mother with the hammer "I don't know how many times."

"The court accepts the findings of the coroner's jury that Chloe Davis was not responsible for the deaths of her mother and brother," said Judge Fox, adding that she was "subjected to shock and fright, and that she was under the complete domination of her mother and therefore not responsible for any acts she may have committed."

He ordered that Chloe be permitted to live with her father or at the home of relatives or friends approved by the probation office.

Americans Best Informed About War, Publishers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—President John S. McCarrens told the American Newspaper Publishers Association today that Americans are better informed about the European war than the peoples of any country in the struggle.

"This condition is an undoubted boon for everybody and merits preserving at all costs," he declared in a prepared address.

McCarrens, vice president and general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said publishers were proud of the job being done by newspapermen abroad.

"They are writing a brilliant chapter in the history of journalism. In fact, the American press as a whole has hung up a new record of achievement since the war started last September.

"Out of all the welter and turbulence and problems of the past year, the big news which I have first to report is that this is still the freest continent in the world, and it has the freest press in the world."

The radio committee of the association reported today an increase of 50 radio stations during 1939, bringing the total to 814.

Stations in which newspapers have a proprietary interest constitute a third of all stations licensed, the report, submitted by Committee Chairman J. S. Gray, of the Monroe, Mich., Evening News, said.

The report said the year witnessed an increase in the volume of spot news broadcasts, principally in the form of sponsored broadcasts.

"Alongside this peak volume on the air of news reports, sponsored and unsponsored, concurrent rises of newspaper circulations are most gratifying and no doubt significant."

British Weigh Plan to Squelch Communists

Study Move as London Is Reported Salving Russia in the Balkans

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 25.—The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor Party, said today that the British government is seriously considering steps to suppress the British Communist Party.

France has banned the Communist Party since the start of the war, and has taken drastic measures against its former leaders.

Party's Works Reviewed

The Daily Herald said Sir John Anderson, the home secretary, and other ministers have been reviewing reports of the party's recent activities. They are believed "concerned with allegations that the party has been acting as the direct agent of a foreign power which is in close and friendly relations with the enemy."

In the House of Commons later today Sir John is expected to announce measures to deal with "fifth column" activities in Great Britain.

The report of the Daily Herald, which usually is well informed in such matters, followed upon indications that Soviet Russia, in her preliminary trade negotiations with Great Britain, is insisting on continuance of "normal" trade relations with Germany as a condition for a commercial agreement with the British.

R. A. Butler, foreign affairs undersecretary, told the House of Commons today that Britain had asked Russia to make concrete proposals for a trade agreement which would be in line with British efforts to keep war supplies from reaching the Reich.

The Communist Party polled only 27,117 votes in the 1935 British general election. It has one member in Parliament, William Gallacher, of Fife, Scotland.

Belgrade, Moscow Agree

Belgrade, April 24 (AP).—Vice-Premier Vladimir Macek said today that the impending trade treaty between Soviet Russia and Yugoslavia would be followed by resumption of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

There have been no such relations since the Russian revolution.

Moreover, the usually government-inspired Zagreb newspaper Novosti said Yugoslavia and the Soviets were "brought together through London."

Novosti also said that the Soviets told the British, when agreeing to take up trade relations with Yugoslavia, that the U. S. S. R. recognizes the status quo in the Balkans and has no intention of seeking to communize the peninsula.

There was a report, moreover, that the preliminary work on the Soviet-Yugoslavian trade negotiations was carried out secretly at Ankara through the Turkish government, which has a mutual assistance pact with the Allies.

Diplomats and newspapers, speculating on the possibility that Russia may soon switch to the Allied line of action in the Balkans, perhaps to block Italo-German plans for domination of the peninsula, said it is not yet clear whether this is "a complete turnabout or only a detour from the present line" of cooperation with Germany.

Reich Halts Press Attacks on Sweden

tions, the Nazi government today expressed regret over the extensive flights by German aircraft over Swedish territory Sunday, and promised investigation.

It was noted, too, that yesterday's German newspaper attacks on the Swedish press and government were not resumed today.

Sweden, too, is proceeding cautiously, and has not yet made any representations to Berlin concerning the machine-gun attack on Swedish fishing boats Monday. While taking note of official German denials of attacks on civilians in Norway, however, the Swedish press today says that in the case of fishing boats the evidence is unquestionable. It was Swedish charges of German attacks on civilians that brought yesterday's German press uproar.

Meanwhile, Sweden's defense measures, which Rear Admiral Claes Lindstrom, commander of the Eastern Naval District, tonight in a speech called "very respectable," were carried further with announcement of preparation for the evacuation of Malmo.

Defense Loan Floated

This city, barely 20 miles across the straits from Denmark, has been given a complete plan for voluntary evacuation of its 145,000 people. Registration and allotment of emergency billets today virtually finished the preliminaries.

In announcing today a defense loan of $125,000,000, the largest in 151 years, Karl Hildebrand, chairman of the national debt commission, said it would be in bonds of 50 crowns to 10,000 crowns, that is, $12.50 to $2,500, with interest at 4 per cent, redeemable in 1945.

German Envoy Spends Hours With Ciano

New Italo-Reich Talks Are Launched; France Is Criticized

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 24.—New and important Italo-German conversations were started today when Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, the German Ambassador, returned from Berlin where he had two audiences with Adolf Hitler. This evening the Ambassador had a long conversation with Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, and he is expected to see Premier Mussolini shortly.

The details of these negotiations are secret, but it is understood Von Mackensen gave Ciano an account of Hitler's plans and it is taken for granted that they discussed not only Norway, but the Balkans and what is to be done about them. It is also believed that the Ambassador has some sort of a special message from the Fuehrer for the Duce.

Italian Press Hostile

The Italian press today assumes a hostile attitude toward France, which seems to be the only answer that Premier Reynaud is going to receive for his friendly overtures of last week.

"They are wondering in France about Italy failing to show a desire to hold friendly conversations regarding the Mediterranean," writes the Popolo di Roma. "we know these recurrent friendly intentions very well; above all, when they are professed in time of war. But Italy has nothing to say or to repeat, because, contrary to the desires of Paris, she has no intention of prejudicing her freedom of judgment or initiative."

German Might Doubted

On the other hand, there are beginning to be signs here of a willingness to make some minor exceptions to the rule that Germany is always right and always victorious. The Gazette del Popolo, writes:

"We can consider a phase of the campaign closed with the Norwegian resistance which, although not decisive, has been rather effective. Aided by knowledge of the terrain it helps to prevent Germans from occupying the whole country before the debarkation of the French and British. German aviation has disturbed those debarkations, but not prevented them."

Flogging Suspect Claims Frame up

Atlanta, April 24 (AP).—Facing a possible nine years in prison as a Ku Klux Klan flogger, Henry Cawthon cried out to a jury today "I've been framed" and pleaded that he be allowed to "go home to my loved ones."

Then he shuffled back to his chair, buried his face on his wife's shoulder, and soon sobs were shaking the broad shoulders of this man the State accuses of laying the lash across the bared backs of nine victims of night riding terrorists. Fifteen others still face trial.

Pastor With Kin In Sweden Blames Versailles Treaty

Sixty clergymen, some with bloodties in Scandinavia, yesterday debated the church's stand in time of conflict, as the annual convention of the New York Conference, Lutheran Augustana Synod, opened here.

Attending a pastors' discussion in the afternoon at the Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire avenue and V street northwest, they argued whether the church should fight for just cause, insisted it should take a definite stand on war issues and "spiritually prepare" for war in times of peace.

Engaging in the discussion was a delegate with two clergymen brothers in Sweden. He was the Rev. Otto H. Bostrom, of New York City, who, airing his pacifistic views, contended that the lack of the forgiveness element in the Versailles Treaty was largely responsible for today's situation.

Expressing his opinions on the question of conscientious objectors, Dr. Felix V. Hanson, of Jamestown, N. Y., president of the conference, said "there could be no such thing when it comes to the invasion of this country."

While one speaker earlier argued that there could be no "just wars" because of the speculation as to which was the just cause, Dr. Hanson said he believed that there were "just wars," but that "we are not having one at the present time."

Answering the pacifistic viewpoints, Dr. Howard W. Snyder, pastor of Atonement Lutheran Church and a visitor to the afternoon session, asked:

"Can you stand by and see Hitler tear your brothers to pieces?" A chaplain in the World War, he said a "good licking" for the enemy "probably would be a good thing . . ."

French Fear Nazi Invasion Of Sweden

By the Associated Press

Paris, April 24.—The French high command has riveted its attention on Sweden, sources close to the War Office declared tonight, following reports that troop-filled German transports had steamed out of Baltic ports for an undisclosed destination.

Confirmation was lacking, but accounts published in Paris have noted Nazi troop concentrations at the Baltic ports of Lubeck, Strasslund, Stettin, Konigsberg and Danzig, as well as several Danish coastal points.

These German concentrations, linked here with Swedish claims of repeated violations of Swedish territory by German warplanes, caused grave consideration of Sweden's future.

A war ministry spokesman interpreted as a "grave menace" to Sweden the reported Nazi troop embarkations.

The presence of icebreakers accompanying the Nazi transports was taken to indicate that the fleet intended to operate farther north in the Baltic than the vicinity of the Danish Straits, through which troop ships for Norway pass. The northern Baltic is filled with ice.

Netherlands Orders Press Censorship

Decree Controlling War News Publication Effective Saturday

Copyright by New York Times

The Hague, April 24.—Freedom of the press will be suspended throughout the Netherlands Saturday, according to a decree published in today's official gazette, and strict military censorship will be established. Issued by Commander Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelmann, the decree prohibits publication of any printed matter, book, periodical or newspaper without license. Such license can be considered automatically granted for all publications excepting those which might interfere with the country's safety, political interests or military measures.

The decree also forbids presentation of one-sided news of belligerents in headlines or stressing any item of news more than it deserves.

Most circles feel the measure is directed against extremists and propagandists only, since for the most part the press has manifested a fair policy. It does not affect foreign correspondents.

The people's council at Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, is discussing a bill for enlarging the navy there. The bill, when passed, will be presented to The Hague Parliament.

It provides for building of three 27,000-ton battle cruisers, one tanker, 12 fast 100-ton submarine chasers and a drydock. The ships will be built in the Netherlands for delivery about May, 1944.

Island Nazis Watched

Batavia, Java, April 24 (AP).—The Netherlands East Indies government told colonial legislators today that it saw no reason now to proclaim martial law such as had been invoked in the homeland, but that a strict watch was being kept on National Socialists (Dutch Nazis) and all of the 23,000 foreigners in the islands.

Germans are the most numerous of the foreign minorities in the East Indies, numbering 7,300. There are 7,200 Japanese and 2,400 Britons.

The native population of the Netherlands East Indies is estimated to be 60,000,000, and there are 200,000 Dutch Nationals, of whom about 2,000 are known to be National Socialists.

Soviet Press View

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, April 24.—The Netherlands East Indies are attracting considerable attention in the Soviet press. The line taken is that Japan hopes to utilize the present war in order to make this area the scene of her next efforts at expansion.

But the United States, it is declared in Red Star, "also claims the Dutch Indies, whose rubber attracts American capitalists, who at the present, more than ever before, long to seize new colonies."

from the fortress and three German destroyers.

Battle in Blizzard

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, April 24.—Despite the blitzkrieg tactics of the eGrmans, based on their air supremacy over Norway, which the Allies have so far been unable to meet, the two decisive battles north of Oslo and north of Trondheim continued today with varying success but with wholly indecisive results.

In the battle north of Trondheim, which is being fought in a blizzard that has covered all roads with some 15 feet of snow, the Germans scored an initial success yesterday when they drove back the Allied advance guard and captured the ruined town of Steinkjer, 60 miles north of Trondheim.

In the decisive Lillehammer sector, at the end of the Gudbrandsdal Valley, however, the Allies and Norwegians are said to have concentrated some 17,000 men and are getting steady reinforcements.

Nevertheless, the continued German initiative and partial success is ample evidence of the fact that the Norwegian campaign is no side issue in this war, and that it will require increasing efforts by the Allies if they are to hold their own—not to speak of driving the Germans from Norway.

North of Trondheim, the German success was possible only because German destroyers control the Trondheim Fjord, since German air bombardments have compelled British warships to withdraw to Namsos where they cannot get into this action.

As a result, the Germans were able to land troops on the Inderoy Peninsula south of Steinkjer, from where they attacked the Allied advance guard in the flank and threatened to cut off their road of retreat. However, though they were under constant fire from front, flank and air, the Allied advance guard retreated in perfect order to the main Allied positions some 6 miles north of Steinkjer. The Germans themselves report only 80 prisoners were captured in Steinkjer, which is taken to indicate that the main units succeeded in their retreat.

Today's British war office communique said:

("In the Trondheim area the counter-attack, which was referred to in yesterday's communique, was delivered by a considerable number of German troops landed from ships within the Trondheim Fjord. After some sharp fighting our troops succeeded in reestablishing the situation. There is nothing further to report about operations elsewhere.")

According to Swedish press dispatches, bombing raids on Allied communication lines and towns occupied by the Allies, in particular on Dombas, have wrecked many towns and have cost the lives of many civilians, but have not seriously troubled the Allied communications. The all-important Dombas Railroad is reported intact although the town itself is ruined.

It is admitted that the German bombing raids have so wrecked the port of Namsos, the Allied landing base north of Trondheim, that it is doubtful whether it can continue to be used as a base. They have likewise compelled the Allied headquarters to move repeatedly, hampering the central direction.

The general lines of this air warfare in Scandinavian theaters are becoming clearer. Until the British can capture an airport in Norway it will be difficult for them to fight the waves of German bombers attacking Allied troop concentrations. Consequently the British have apparently decided to do everything they can by using their own bombers to attack German bombers at their bases and cut up the landing fields so badly that the Germans cannot land safely.

Narvik Struggle Reported

Stockholm (Thursday), April 25 (U.P.).—Stiff fighting was reported early today from Narvik where Allied troops sought to deliver a knockout blow to 2,000 Germans holding the besieged iron ore port on Norway's Arctic coast.

Then they obtained a truck ride Subsequently they obtained cars at Lillehammer and reached Sjosjoen on April 15

"The commander realized they had to return to Lillehammer if they ever got the road clear," the minister's story related.

"He finally got a horse sled for five miles to a village where he procured an automobile to go to Lillehammer. He reached Lillehammer at 5:30 p. m., contacted military authorities and asked for help . . . there had been a heavy blizzard all day long.

Alarms Every 2 Hours

"There were air alarms about every two hours throughout the day. The storm continued. He tried to get a mechanic to fix up the cars (two of the three which the party had at Sjosjoen would not start . . .) He arranged for a mechanic about 10 a. m. Thursday to drive within five miles of Sjosjoen.

"Then he hired two sleds with two horses and four men with shovels. The military plow had started work one hour previously. The rescue party got to Sjosjoen . . . The cars were fixed and the Americans left Sjosjoen about 4 p. m. . . . With the aid of horses and shovels they finally reached Lillehammer at 7 p. m.

"I learned that passage was blocked at Elverum by a destroyed bridge. We adopted a northern route, leaving Lillehammer at 11 a. m. April 19, flying American flags from our fenders and bigger ones over the tops of the cars. That night we spent at farmhouses along the way."

The next day it was necessary to proceed by train and while waiting at Dombas Station the party took refuge in a tunnel. From there the Americans traveled to Brekken; then took a bus to Sjallas, reaching Sweden with "the entire party in excellent shape apart from being exhausted from the arduous journey."

Those in the party included Mrs. Ray Cox, of Philadelphia, wife of the secretary of the Oslo Legation, and their son, Allan, 10; Mrs. Austin Roe Preston, of Buffalo, N. Y., wife of the American consul, and their daughter, Shirley, 12; Mrs. Brigg A. Perkins, wife of a vice consul, and their son, Tony, 4; Mrs. Easton Kelsey, of Ann Arbor, Mich., wife of another vice consul, and their son, Easton, jr.; Mrs. Thormod O. Klath, of Brooklyn, wife of the legation's commercial attache, and their daughter, Carolyn, 10, and Prof. Andreas Ronhove, of Rutgers University, his wife and two children.

Mrs. Harriman Arrives

The United States Minister to Norway, Mrs. Florence Jaffray Harriman, arrived last night. She plans to remain until the situation is cleared.

"I knew the area was becoming a dangerous fighting sector so I forced the party to keep going, although all were dog tired," Commander Hagen recounted tonight.

"Yes, we wanted to stop and rest," put in Mrs. Klath, "but he made us kepe on. In view of the fighting we know why now."

Comely Mrs. Klath, complaining only over the fact that she had to leav most of her clothes in Oslo, said she probably would return to the United States shortly to place her daughter in school. Her husband is continuing on the job in Oslo.

Stavanger Area Subdued, Germans Say

Report Surrender Of 1,300 Norwegians And 50 Officers

By Percival Knauth
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, April 24.—Hostilities in the Stavanger area of southwestern Norway ended yesterday with the surrender of two Norwegian regiments and the capture of 50 officers and 1,300 men, the German army communique reports today. The Norwegians finally succumbed to the combined attack of land and air forces after stubborn resistance.

The Germans now claim undisputed possession of a wide area of southern Norway, extending from the Atlantic to the Swedish border, and appear to be ready to switch their campaign from localized clean-up operations against the isolated Norwegian forces to a determined offensive launched from the Oslo district.

With the Norwegian capital as a base, today's army communique reports, "The main bodies of the German expeditionary forces are penetrating north and northwestward."

British Munitions Captured

German troops advancing north of Lillehammer reportedly captured 20 machine-guns, 6 antitank guns and 1,000,000 rounds of infantry ammunition of British make.

East of Bergen Germans attacked Norwegian troops concentrated at Voss, 5 miles inland, on the single railroad line leading from Berger to the interior. This line terminates finally in Oslo, running considerably south of Lillehammer and Hamar through Honefoss. Its complete possession would mean for the Germans direct communications between the Atlantic port of Bergen and Oslo.

A considerable number of troops appears to be reinforcing the German advance guard north of Oslo in the Lillehammer sector. The communique reports "further reinforcements are coming to their support."

Communists Said To Rule Ship Radio

Chairman Dies himself stated that Howe's testimony at to Rathborne's alleged communism was based on "secondary evidence" which was admitted into the committee's record only because of the Communist Party's refusal to make public its membership list.

Quoted Browder

One reason for believing that Rathborne was a Communist, said Howe, was because at a union trial, Rathborne had read the Declaration of Independence "from Earl Browder's book on communism."

"That's enough proof for me," declared Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, as he observed that Rathborne's appointment to the NYA was "an example of the flirtation of the New Deal with Communists."

Howe also alleged Rathborne had not denied the allegation of communism.

The witness charged that the Communist Party had been able to place "probably 150 or more good members" as radio operators on American merchant vessels. In time of war, he said, they could "sew up" the ships and "help establish a Soviet system here."

Naming as communists several radio operators on Government and privately owned American ships and land stations, Howe included in his list George Stano, radio operator of Davies' yacht.

The former ambassador to Russia, who is now assistant to Secretary Hull, said last night that Stano had been employed as chief wireless operator on the Sea Cloud since 1934, is an "excellent operator" and "thoroughly trusted by his captain."

Davies Skeptical

"I do not know his politics or his religion," Davies added. "If he is a Communist it would be a great surprise, not only to me, but also to his shipmates, and I do not think he is."

Queried closely by Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, on the charge that Stano is a Communist, Howe gave a variety of reasons for his belief.

Stano became a member of the union in a "suspicious" way and stood for "everything Rathborne stood for and was very much opposed to what I stood for," the witness said.

"Everybody took sides," Howe added, "and we learned that those who were not Communists were not afraid to get up and say so." Howe declared a "strong indication" of what Stano believed was given once when he went aboard Stano's ship and was "all but ushered off, though he had no reason to dislike me."

"If you can't get their membership cards, you have to judge by their actions and that's good enough for me," declared Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois.

"It's good enough for me," agreed Howe.

Howe stated that Rathborne had received $100,000 from the C. I. O. to organize communications workers and longshoremen.

Earlier in the day, Chairman Dies had publicly urged the C. I. O. to "clean house" by expelling any Communist members. He said the C. I. O. owed a duty to the country to "quit sidestepping and ducking this issue."

Turning the Tables, 60 Talented Youngsters Play Back Classical Music to Dr. Kindler

Orchestra Director Holds Auditions In Orchestra Tryouts

Dr. Hans Kindler, who as orchestra conductor has delighted in bringing the classics to thousands of boys and girls, yesterday had as good a time hearing a group of talented youngsters play classical music back to him.

Sixty young musicians from Washington, the Virginias and North Carolina appeared before the conductor here in the hope that their efforts will entitle them to a place in the Leopold Stokowski's All-American Youth Orchestra. The orchestra tours South America this summer.

Stokowski, now on a Nation-wide tour to select members for his 110-piece orchestra, enlisted Dr. Kindler's help in conducting auditions in this part of the country.

Yesterday Kindler acted as judge from 9 a. m. until 6:15 p. m. with an hour off for lunch. He heard 30, and plans to hear as many more today.

He was especially impressed with a trombonist, a youngster from rural North Carolina with little or no formal training, but a natural musician with "fine technique, certainty and tone."

It was in the capacity of judge that Kindler was worried.

"I wish you would say for me that we will have places for only 110 in the orchestra," he said. "I should say there will be about 1,000 candidates all over the country. The 900 who don't make it shouldn't feel unhappy."

Nazi Planes Driven Off At Scapa Flow

Raid Takes Place After British Shower 5 German Bases

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 25.—Antiaircraft guns of Scapa Flow, the great British naval base in the Orkney Islands, late last night beat off an attack by German warplanes.

Only a few raiders participated, but they dropped heavy bombs. Authorized British sources said no damage was caused; that they fell on desolate country in the island of Hoy. One explosion shook houses 6 miles away.

Showers of British bombs blasted five Nazi air bases over a 400-mile radius in Germany, Denmark and Norway yesterday, while British infantrymen, fighting off a vigorous German counterattack, were officially stated to have clung to their rocky positions in the Trondheim area.

Two Million Mobilized

While the big bombers of the Royal Air Force ferried their loads of death across the North Sea (two of a "large number" failed to come back), Allied land columns were reported converging on strategically important Lillehammer, valley gate to the south of Norway.

Proudly, Britain disclosed that 2,000,000 men of the empire now are "standing to" in the army's drab khaki, awaiting the summer's battles.

Since French mobilization mustered 5,000,000 men to the tricolor, the Allies now have 7,000,000 soldiers facing Germany's Reichswehr, the strength of which is estimated in London military circles at from 8,500,000 to 9,000,000.

Attempting to halt the flow of German divisions into Norway, the R. A. F. struck at Stavanger, Oslo and Kristiansand, Norway; Aalborg, Denmark, and at the German island of Sylt, off Southwest Denmark. Twice they attacked German ships.

At Westland Airdrome on Sylt, a British account said, one hangar was hit several times and another believed to have been damaged badly. Another British plane assaulted naval auxiliaries off the shore.

Aalborg was visited for the fourth time.

20 Planes Believed Destroyed

"High level bombing attacks were made and numerous hits were observed on the airdrome," said the pilots.

At Stavanger, pilots said they believed they had destroyed or damaged badly most of the 20 German planes scattered around the airdrome. Runways, too, were hit; so was the "already crater-pitted" surface of the often-bombed air field.

At Kristiansand, bomb bursts were reported at the edge of one runway, between the runway and hangars, and within 50 yards of the main hangars.

The landing ground at Fornebu, Oslo's main land and sea airport, was reported battered by the bombers. One plane of this flight attacked two German ships in Oslo Fjord.

The war office remained silent on the extent of the British reinforcements to Norway. However, it was learned that a steady stream of troops is being fed into France and in the middle east.

'Allies Defeat' Story Angers Sen. Pittman; Published Version Is False, He Asserts

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, last night expressed angry concern over the publication in certain American newspapers of a purported interview in which he was represented as saying that United States Government officials thought the Allies could not win the current war unless they could drive the Nazis out of Norway within 30 days.

The story, picked up from the American newspaper and cabled to Berlin, became an "international incident" because the Nazi-controlled radio broadcasting system of that country used it in one of its "news" broadcasts.

In the German version of the story, broadcast with obvious propaganda intent, Senator Pittman, whose position as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee makes him one of the key figures among top-ranking American officials concerned with the assessment of developments abroad, was represented as giving a "press interview" in which he was quoted, in effect, as making this prediction:

That, if the Allies should not succeed in driving the German army out of Norway within 30 days, it would be virtually impossible for them to win the current European war, and that this view was held in most American Government quarters.

What actually happened, Senator Pittman said, was that a reporter asked him yesterday for a copy of an address he made in Nevada on April 16 to a group of Young Democrats, in which he discussed the European situation and expressed his own opinion that it was very important to the Allies for them to succeed in driving the Germans out of Norway within 30 days.

In the same speech, he said, he emphasized the view that the United States is determined not to become involved in the current war and gave reassurance to American mothers that their Government had no intention of sending their sons abroad.

In it, he recalled, he cited the problems which would confront the United States under the Monroe Doctrine if the Germans should win the war. At no point, he insisted, did he suggest that Government officials in Washington had the idea that, unless the Allies were able to drive the Germans out of Norway within 30 days, they were virtually certain to lose the war.

The Senator was so angry about the incident that he asserted that he would denounce the story on the Senate floor today.

1,920,000 Relief Quota

A national relief quota of 1,920,000 persons for May was authorized by the Works Projects Administration yesterday, a reduction of 200,903 from April's. The reduction is in line with the WPA's plans to drop 700,000 from the rolls during April, May and June to stay within the limits of its 1939-1940 fiscal year appropriation.

Senate and House Speed Bill To Protect Holdings of Aliens

By the Associated Press

Working with unaccustomed speed, the Senate and House Banking Committees yesterday approved legislation empowering President Roosevelt to prevent Germany from getting possession of any wealth in this country as a result of its invasions.

The President has already acted to "freeze" the American holdings of Norway and Denmark and to prevent their withdrawal from this country without special license. However, New York bankers had raised the question whether he had sufficient authority to require licenses for transactions in foreign-owned securities.

Secretary Morgenthau laid before the House Banking Committee yesterday morning legislation to clear up this question. The committee spent about an hour listening to explanations by Morgenthau and aids and then broke up, with Chairman Steaball (Democrat), Alabama, announcing unanimous committee approval of the measure. Democratic Leader Rayburn, of Texas, told reporters he would seek unanimous consent to call the bill up in the House today.

Swift Action in Senate

Morgenthau and his aids then walked across to the Senate side of the Capitol, where Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, called a meeting of the Senate Banking Committee. In a 30-minute session, the committee approved the bill unanimously, and Wagner said he would ask Senate action on it today.

Wagner filed a committee report saying the legislation was made necessary by "certain questions" which had arisen in connection with the President's executive order of April 10 "freezing" the Norwegian and Danish investments.

The report said that "a few lawyers for banking institutions" had raised the question whether Congress had given the President authority to regulate transactions in foreign-owned stock when it voted legislation in 1933 aimed at preventing domestic hoarding.

"The committee is convinced that doubts of this character should be immediately removed by a clarifying amendment," the report said.

"Not only is the authority to regulate transactions in stock and other securities essential to the system of control already in force, but it may be of even greater importance if it becomes necessary to extend such control to property of other countries which to an even greater extent is in the form of stock and securities."

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, a committee member, said:

"I am one of those impossible persons who believes that we should keep Germany from getting any of the property of those invaded countries—do it right if we can; do it wrong if we must."

Morgenthau told reporters the legislation was sufficiently broad to apply to the nationals of any country that might be invaded in the European war.

U.S. Embargo Extension Protested by Japan

By International News Service

Japan has formally protested to the United States over recent extension of the moral embargo on exports of materials necessary to aerial warfare, it was learned last night.

The protest drew a brief and unyielding response from the State Department, to the effect that it reserves all rights in connection with the regulation of domestic business as related to prosecution of the moral embargo, it was said.

Specifically, the Tokyo government appealed from extension of the moral embargo to include machinery for the manufacture and refining of aviation gasoline. This was the third and most recent extension of the embargo.

'Life With Father' Reaps A Few Spring Awards

Wins Theater Club and Barter Theater Prizes; Peggy Wood, Violet Heming for Fund Benefit; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SOME THOUGHTFUL ATTENTION-CALLER has pointed out that spring floods and theater awards are sure signs of spring and that "Life With Father," Broadway's dominant comedy hit, is getting its share of both. Celebrating its two hundredth performance, come Saturday, the hilarious "smash" by Howard Lindsay—who plays the title role—and Russel Crouse, has been honored by both The Theater Club and the Barter Theater in their annual awards, while the floods of scrambling customers continue to inundate the box-office of the Empire Theater, in New York.

BELL

The prize of The Theater Club, consisting of medals for both authors, was given to "Life With Father" because it is "the best American play of the current season." Seventy-one per cent of the voters picked this item from a slate of seven plays. Last year the honor went to Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

The unique award of Robert Porterfield's Barter Theater, in Abingdon, Va., was bestowed upon Dorothy Stickney, who plays the leading feminine role in the Broadway company. Given annually for the most distinguished performance of the season, it consists of an acre of ground in Abingdon, one smoked Virginia ham and the privilege of choosing two apprentices to attend the Barter Theater's next summer session. The award will be officially conferred upon Miss Stickney by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at a forthcoming luncheon.

All of this may be just a trifle premature. We are harried by a sneaking notion that Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," now at the National, will figure prominently among the first award candidates, once it has been seen on Broadway—which will be next week. Standing-room audiences are hailing this new drama of Finland at every performance. What we have neglected to stress in earlier comments is that "There Shall Be No Night," despite its serious treatment and import, contrives to afford many moments of delightful humor. There are laughs sprinkled throughout its length. If Mr. Sherwood has written a "propaganda play," he has done it with such consummate skill as never to shadow its value as superlative dramatic entertainment.

Added to the distinguished list of stars already announced for Daniel Frohman's Actors Fund Benefit, in the National Theater on Sunday night, May 5, are Peggy Wood and Violet Heming, who will appear in Patricia Collinge's sensational sketch, "Perfectly Marvelous." The playlet was especially written for the fund benefit in New York last January and was played by Tallulah Bankhead and Miss Collinge, since seen at the National in the foremost feminine roles in Lillian Hellman's hit, "The Little Foxes."

He may be the last of the scriveners to reach a local stage this season, but he is the veteran of them all at this sort of thing. Preceded to Loew's Capitol by both The Post's Louella O. Parsons and Jimmie Fidler and their youthful troupes, Ed Sullivan, formerly of these pages, and his "Star Dust Cavalcade" come along tomorrow to the F street rostrum to provide the stage portion of the new bill. Ed has been doing this sort of thing for years on end and knows his way around behind any man's footlights. He brings with him this time Douglas McPhail and Betty Janes, the singing stars of "Babes in Arms" and "seconds" to Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Sweethearts"; Arthur Treacher, the "gentleman's gentleman" and prime comedian; Bela Lugosi, the gooseflesh actor; Marjorie Weaver, Helen Parish, so often Deanna Durbin's menace, and Vivienne Fay, to do the dancing. Ed, himself, acts as master of ceremonies and does an illustrated monologue of his own. The "Cavalcade" is being greeted at a cocktail party in the north lounge of the Carlton this afternoon at 3:30.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 24.

Hollywood's been pretty tolerant about Orson Welles until he took his latest crack at it last week in Kansas City when he's supposed to have said of the movies, "I will speak only in terms of contempt. The average person goes to the movies because it's better than drink." Day after this incident Orson took a paid ad in our trade papers to say that Hollywood probably doesn't care what I think about it—"but I care very much when I'm grossly misquoted on the subject." It's interesting that his next air show may be from the Bible. He has already made a recording starting with Genesis. And when Adam and Eve enter the garden their voices come in—all to the background of a symphony orchestra. He blew up several times when he came to the part about creation. Not even Orson can ad lib the Bible.

HOPPER

Our glamour girls are having George Cukor's mineral oil salad dressing mixed right at the table in the Hollywood restaurants, all for the sake of the "Figger."

Can you imagine Anita Louise chewing tobacco? Neither can I—but it was the smart thing to do in 1840, so she'll do it in "Wagons Westward"—only she'll use brown licorice. She's learned the technique from Cowboy Gabby Hayes—and Anita says she feels like the spittin' image of an old tintype!

Ted Scherdeman, N. B. C. writer-producer, is putting into practice a new idea in radio production. He has worked for months on the plan and in practice it's more successful than even he anticipated. The mike, which has been the nemesis of many a fine actor and actress is no longer a bugaboo. Actual rooms are placed upon the stage, and the action of the dramatic cast is just as it would be in the theater, the microphone so placed that the artist does not have to be conscious of the pick-up. More power to Ted.

Guy Kibbee's small daughter, Shirley, brought him up with a jerk the other morning saying, "Gee, Daddy, your eyes poke out just like that man's on the front of Esquire."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 24 (INS).—John Barrymore's escapades and even his little innuendoes against his home town—Hollywood—haven't hurt him. Two companies, I learn, are interested in bringing the great Barrymore back to Hollywood. One of them is Warners and the other Twentieth Century-Fox. I have an idea "Jawn" will heed the call of Zanuck, for he would have a chance to do in "The Great Profile" a little of what he did in "My Dear Children."

LOUELLA PARSONS

The payoff on the whole Twentieth Century-Fox deal, which story, by the way, comes to me direct from New York, is that "Jawn" was about to sue Twentieth Century-Fox for "The Great Profile," which he claims is a libel against him. He was offered such a fancy price for his services and those of Elaine that Elaine has practically decided they will accept. The story is based on the life of the one and only (junior) Barrymore.

I nearly swallowed my grapefruit whole this morning when I heard that Orson Welles is leading the procession of movie possibilities for the Alexander Woollcott role in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Orson would like nothing better than to follow in the footsteps of Woollcott, Monty Woolley and Clifton Webb, and I'll bet he'd be good, too. The young genius has been unmercifully ribbed for his movie fiasco, and up to date, although it has cost RKO a pretty penny, he hasn't made a picture. I hope that Welles was misquoted in the interview in which he was supposed to have said, "I shall proceed to refer to movies only in terms of contempt."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Richard Ainley, Constance Bennett's heartbeat, took a test at Warners yesterday; Andrea Leeds is in St. Vincent's Hospital for observation; is the Matty Fox-Patricia Morison romance cooling? She has been stepping out with Freddie Brisson; Anita Louise and Buddy Adler will wed May 18 with a large church wedding. Ida Lupino and Wendy Barrie will be two of the bridesmaids; rumor is that Conrad Veidt is on his way here to test for the role of the general in "Escape."

Jeanne Cagney has checked in at the Good Samaritan Hospital; she had two wisdom teeth extracted; Joy Hodges, looking like a million, planed in for a visit with her friends and to listen to several movie offers.

Bill Powell's petite bride visited him on the set and saw him make love to Myrna Loy;

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Cohan 'Tavern' Sequel Billed For Next Week

Four New Films Open Tomorrow on Downtown Screens

"THE RETURN OF THE VAGABOND." George M. Cohan returns to "The Tavern" on another stormy night in his newly completed sequel to the well-loved melodrama which, although it is in its seventeenth year, remains a great favorite. Again the tavern-keeper, the Governor and his family share the scene with the village constabulary. McKay Morris, Edward McNamara, E. J. Blunkhall, Celeste Holm, Gretchen Davidson, John Cherry, Marie Louise Dana and Florenz Ames are in the company. Besides being star and author, Mr. Cohan is also "The Return of the Vagabond's" producer. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Palace

"STRANGE CARGO." Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are reunited as costars in this melodrama of a cafe entertainer forced to accompany a savage convict and his fellows when they escape from a penal colony. The film is adapted from Richard Sale's novel, "Not Too Narrow—Not Too Deep." Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre, Paule Lukas, Eduardo Cianneli and Victor Varconi are in the supporting cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE." Loretta Young and Ray Milland are the principals in this farce concerning the authoress, who dubs herself "Public Spinster No. 1," and a young doctor who abhors "career women." Through circumstances beyond their control, they are married; publicly the scheme is a peaceful one, but in private they clash loudly. "Gentlemen, Be Seated," Harry Anger's second edition of his modern minstrel show, will be the stage attraction. Gus Van will be interlocutor, Charles "Slim" Timblin and Lou Lubin, the end men. Clark Dennis, Roy Smeck, the Hudson Wonders, the Virginians and the Roxyettes, complete the roster. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"JOHNNY APOLLO." Tyrone Power costars with Dorothy Lamour in this story of a young collegian who turns mobster when his banker-father is sent to prison and his friends turn against him. Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan, Charley Grapewin and Lionel Atwill have the chief supporting roles. On the Capitol stage will be Ed Sullivan presenting a group of Hollywood players in Stardust Cavalcade." Marjorie Weaver, Bela Lugosi, Helen Parrish, Arthur Treacher, Vivienne Fay, Douglas McPhail and Betty Janes are the motion picture representatives who will offer some of the specialties which have made them favorites. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"SEVENTEEN." Booth Tarkington's story of young love comes to the screen with Jackie Cooper as Willie Baxter, to whom a blind date is more exciting than a baseball game, and Betty Field as his Chicago sweetheart. Otto Kruger, as the father, who cannot recall his own boyhood; Ann Shoemaker, as the mother, who understands her son; Norma Nelson, as the snooping "kid" sister, and Peter Hayes, as the smart aleck, are ther principals. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

IT'S A DATE." Deanna Durbin continues into her third week in her seventh and latest musical success. With the young star in this story of a mother's beau and a trip to Hawaii, are Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon and Lewis Howard. The "March of Time" issue on American youth problems also continues.

Columbia

"THE GRAPES OF WRATH." After two weeks at the Palace, this notable screen version of the John Steinbeck novel returns for another downtown engagement. John Ford directed and Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Charley Grapewin, Dorris Bowdon, Russell Simpson and Eddie Quillan are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Belasco

"ECSTASY." The Czech film, which brought Hedy Lamarr into prominence three years ago, is being continued at the Belasco until the middle of next week. The story tells, with much use of symbolism, of a beautiful woman's frustrated love.

Trans-Lux

"TOMORROW'S STARS." Clark Griffith, owner of the "Senators," plays a leading role in this short subject on the timely matter of baseball. "Making the Funnies," with Arthur Hale interviewing the creators of the comic strips; "Little Lambkin" and a travelogue to the Argentine are the other short features coming to the newsreel house. Opens tomorrow morning.

Open-Air

"THE HUMAN MONSTER." This Edgar Wallace thriller comes to the screen with Bela Lugosi playing one Dr. Orloff, who forges insurance policies, lures his "clients" to a "house of the blind," and then neatly does away with them. Hugh Williams, Gretna Gynt and Edmond Ryan have the other leads in this film opening a three-day run at the drive-in theater on the Richmond Highway tonight.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK is currently stressing its unique importance for those who would "get away from it all." Work, war, hard times in "business and social life" are forgotten at Glen Echo. Paul Kain plays for dancing in the Spanish Garden ballroom every night, except Sundays, from 9 'til midnight.

Gayety

"THE STREAMLINERS." Geraldine is the star of the production opening at the burlesque theater Sunday afternoon. Vicki Wells and Morita Montez are the featured feminine charmers, while the comedy contingent will be headed by "Stinky and Shorty." Sammy Smith, Irving Karo, Bert Saunders and Dorothy De Haven are others on the cast sheet.

The New Yorker

New York, April 24.

THE INDICTMENT against George Scalise, president of the Building Service Employes Union, has spread to other camps. It now involves a political leader—a Republican . . . Alec Woollcott was stricken in San Francisco Monday. He'll be out of the show for at least two weeks . . . Eve Curie stated Monday night that she will return to France immediately—on the first clipper leaving for Europe . . . Paul Kern, Civil Service commissioner, may inherit the post of directer of personnel for the State of Connecticut.

PROFESSOR THOMAS REED POWELL and Supreme Court Justice Douglas attended the Columbia Law Review dinner last weekend. . . They entertained the guests by singing Gallagher and Sheean parodies about the law . . . Douglas once had been a pupil in Prof. Powell's class in constitutional law. "Don't forget, Bill," Powell reminded, "I once laid down the law to you" . . . "And you don't forget," said the Supreme Court Justice, "that now I'm laying it down to you."

LUISE RAINIER, who has absented herself from Hollywood for more than a year, will return to the Coast next week . . . Leopold Stokowski's good-will tour to South America may be cancelled . . . The liquor-control boards are cautioning cafes against advertising zombies, bombies, or similar drinks which are being publicized only for their potency . . . Artie Shaw still uses his old stationery—stamped "Artie Shaw and His Orchestra"—but adds the typewritten phrase, "What orchestra?" His Lana Turner, incidentally, is now a brunette . . . Lily Pons and Lawrence Tibbett will sing at the World's Fair on May 13, under the sponsorship of the International Business Machine Corporation.

A FEW DAYS AGO, when Eleanor Roosevelt flew from Washington to New York, one of the passengers informed her that he had just returned from a trip to South America. "I saw President Vargas of Brazil," he told her, "and asked him why he doesn't visit the United States. Vargas said that he'll make the trip—if President Roosevelt occupies the White House for a third term" . . . Mrs. Roosevelt replied: "Must he make that a condition?"

A GUSHING FAN, who had heard Woollcott lecturing, saw him perform last week in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." She managed to secure an introduction to him later, and said: "Mr. Woollcott, now I've seen you on the stage as well as on the lecture platform. Tell me, which do you prefer—acting, or lecturing?" . . . "My dear lady," Woollcott informed, "that's like asking me whether I prefer an emetic, or castor oil."

SUNDAY EVENING George Jessel met Jack Benny and asked if he was going to the 4 A's Ball . . . "No, I'm too tired to go," Benny sighed. "Are you going?" . . . "Sure, I'm going," said Jessel—who this year had commuted between New York and Miami every week-end, arranged with Ben Hecht to produce, write and appear in a movie, conducted a radio program, worked in vaudeville—and married 16-year-old Lois Andrew . . . "Well, if you're not too tired to go," said Benny, accepting Jessel's invitation, "then I'm not too tired."

PAT HARRINGTON, who has been touring with the Helen Hayes show, returns to Jack White's 18 Club . . . After all these years, Frank Sullivan has grown a mustache . . . Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will be invited to tour South America, as a good-will gesture after the conclusion of their theater commitments here . . . Richard Watts, who didn't like Albert Bein's "Heavenly Express," was one of the men who helped Bein get a Guggenheim Fellowship . . . On the day before Lepke entrained for the penitentiary, he received tempting promises of aid, if he would spill his story and involve others. "If I ever talked, I could murder those others with my story," Lepke told the officials. "But I won't; enough murders have been committed already."

Warren William stars on the screen in "The Lone Wolf Strikes." Opens tomorrow morning.

"SCARFACE." Paul Muni's initial film triumph and one of the first of the "gangster" films is being revived with Ann Dvorak, George Raft and Karen Morley in the central supporting roles. Muni's gangster is an arrogant, egotistical and shrewd law-breaker and, despite the many gangster films which have followed "Scarface," remains the most sharply drawn of all such characters.

ConclaveOpens On Rising Realty Taxes

National Conference To Seek Equitable Solution of Problem

Mounting real estate taxes and what to do about them is the thorny problem drawing personal representatives of six State Governors and many other interested groups to Washington for the opening today of the first national conference ever held on real estate levies.

The two-day conference at the Mayflower Hotel will attempt to frame a program of action to achieve "a more equitable real estate taxation situation," Myers Y. Cooper, former Governor of Ohio, and chairman of the planning committee for the conference, emphasized yesterday.

Home ownership and private home-building are being discouraged by tax-exempt public housing projects, Dr. Herbert D. Simpson, of Northwestern University, declared in an interview yesterday as he prepared to make an opening address at the conference this morning.

Dr. Simpson will develop this theme in his speech this morning.

Other speakers on the program for the opening session today include:

Clarence D. Martin, Governor of Washington; Cooper, Philip C. Hodill, president, National Association of Building Onwers and Managers; Byron T. Schutz, president, Mortgage Bankers Association of America; Newton C. Farr, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards; Louis J. Taber, master, the National Grange, Earl C. Smith, vice president, American Farm Bureau Federation, and Frank J. Murray, president, Taxpayers Federation, Inc.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

In The Keystone State

Complete control of the Democratic organization in Pennsylvania seems to have passed into the hands of Senator Guffey as a result of his easy victory over Walter A. Jones, of Pittsburgh, in Tuesday's primary election.

While the vote was light, this fact in itself emphasizes the magnitude of Mr. Guffey's triumph. A light vote generally favors the candidate with organization backing, since the machine can be relied upon to produce its full strength at the polls no matter how great the general apathy. Most of the Democratic organization in Pennsylvania, including its chairman, was behind Mr. Jones. The effort to unseat the Senator, as a result of the party split in the Keystone State two years ago, was very real. Its failure is, therefore, the more pronounced.

President Roosevelt carefully refrained from playing favorites in this local feud. And as Mr. Jones was in no sense anti-Administration—a third Democrat who opposed the New Deal polled barely 50,000 votes—Senator Guffey's fervent support of the President would seem to have little national significance.

More noteworthy was the heavy vote for Roosevelt as a third-term candidate, though this is subject to discount as the President's name was the only one, of either party, entered as a preference on the ballot. In the very small write-in voting on Republican ballots Mr. Dewey emerges far in the lead as the preferred standard bearer of the G. O. P. in Pennsylvania.

The Republican vote, running ahead of that of the Democrats by about the registration proportion of 5 to 4, fulfilled the expected by nominating Jay Cooke. The Republican city chairman of Philadelphia apparently established a 3-to-1 majority as Senatorial candidate of his party. And he will enter the November campaign with a united backing.

The fight between Mr. Cooke and Senator Guffey promises to be close. For while the latter has gained full authority over the Democratic machine, the split of the past two years has left bad feeling. And the time is short for establishment of a really harmonious front against the forces which habitually carry the Keystone State.

In Need Of Amendment

In part, Representative Bruce Barton's criticism of the United States Housing Authority, in his New York speech on Tuesday, may have been inspired by politics. Yet Mr. Barton is sincerely interested in slum clearance and wishes to see some kind of housing program continue. His skeptical attitude toward present efforts to rescue slum dwellers from their environment is important because it reflects the attitude of many Congressmen.

There is little question that a majority of Congressmen favor public housing for low-income families now living under conditions hazardous to health, morals and morale. "Slums stand condemned," as Mr. Barton says, "by the social conscience of our generation." But this does not mean that the House is ready to extend the borrowing and lending powers of the USHA by $800,000,000 and increase annual subsidies to $73,000,000 per year.

At its last session the House voted down a rule which would have permitted consideration of the USHA bill. That measure is still awaiting action and the opposition appears to be formidable.

Constructive leadership is needed to avoid outright defeat of the bill, on one hand, and authorization of an unnecessarily expensive program, on the other. In recent months the USHA has demonstrated that outlays for low-cost housing can be sharply cut. Some of the projects for which it lends funds still include expensive recreation facilities that could well be eliminated. But it has made notable progress toward economy. And annual contributions or subsidies have been substantially reduced.

Still the measure before the House has not been modified in line with these achievements. By striking out funds for the proposed rash venture into farm housing, restricting the amounts which may be spent for so-called "nondwelling facilities" and taking a healthy slice off the sum requested for subsidies, the most pointed objections to the bill would be overcome.

What is needed is housing legislation that can be reconciled with the very urgent need for economy. Even the most desirable social programs cannot long be pursued with borrowed money. If the low-rent housing bill is brought into line with fiscal realities before it is presented to the House for a final vote, the chance of continuing this great social experiment will be greatly enhanced.

The CAA Transfer

Opposition to the President's reorganization order transferring the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce and abolishing the Air Safety Board is assuming impressive proportions. That opposition is not inspired by the officials concerned, nor does it originate in partisan hostility to the Administration.

In the Senate the fight against the proposed changes is led by Senator McCarran supported by a number of his Democratic colleagues from Western States. Most active among the groups opposing the transfer is the Air Line Pilots Association which is interested only in maintaining safe and efficient service by commercial airlines.

Since the Air Safety Board was created accidents have been sharply reduced. During the past year members of the Pilots Association have flown over 87,000,000 miles and carried over 2,000,000 passengers without a fatality. In a letter to Congress protesting the reorganization order, the pilots contrast this remarkable record with that established under the old Bureau of Air Commerce which was attached to the Department of Commerce. Under that regime, 473 pilots and passengers were killed, an average of one pilot every 28 days and one passenger every 15 days.

Of course, it cannot be assumed that all of this improvement is due to changes in the administrative set-up. Nevertheless, the excellent results achieved under the present arrangement constitute a very strong argument in favor of continuing it.

The air pilots are convinced that the large number of fatalities under the old regime was partly due to combining in one agency the functions of regulating civil aeronautics and investigating accidents. The bureau which installs and maintains aids to air navigation is not, in the opinion of the pilots, qualified to determine whether it has taken proper precautions against the occurrence of accidents.

There may be reasons for the proposed shift of the CAA which are not known to the public. And there may be persuasive arguments in favor of abolishing the Air Safety Board. If so, they should be thoroughly aired, for so far defense of the executive order has been extremely feeble.

Senator McCarran has introduced a resolution calling for Senate disapproval of the proposed changes. Hearings on that resolution would afford a much needed opportunity for discussion of the merits of the executive order. Congress ought not to permit such a controversial proposal to become effective at the end of the 60-day waiting period unless it is convinced that the change is justified.

Protecting A Racket

While the House turned somersaults over the District tax bill on Monday, the Senate indulged in a curious performance of a different sort. At least the House confronted the tax dilemma before voting to do nothing about it. The Senate voted 33 to 21 against taking up a bill to end the automobile-lien racket.

Senator Overton did have a chance to explain the purpose of the bill. He pointed out that purchasers of second-hand cars in the District are frequently swindled because automobile titles are issued by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic and liens against automobiles are recorded, if at all, with the recorder of deeds. To protect himself against hidden liens the purchaser must hire a lawyer to search the records. Even that quest may be fruitless, for the exorbitant fees fixed by Congress discourage the filing of liens.

In these circumstances, as Senator Schwellenbach pointed out, an automobile title issued by the District is "merely a snare and a delusion so far as the purchaser of a car is concerned." Almost every day some motorist discovers that an automobile which he has purchased in good faith has been taken from him because of a hidden lien of which he had no knowledge.

Most of the leading civic organizations of Washington have protested against this racket and indorsed the bill to extirpate it. Opposition seems to have come only from William J. Thompkins, the recorder of deeds, who does not want to see the filing of automobile liens transferred from his office. But that opposition has assumed formidable proportions because Mr. Thompkins is a Negro, and many legislators are loath, in this election year, to take a stand which might possibly be interpreted as being unfriendly to colored voters.

Mr. Thompkins himself is eager to see the racket ended, as indicated by his letter to The Post on April 18. He favors legislation that would make the recording of automobile liens mandatory, reduce the charges and require his office to certify records of these liens to the director of traffic. Such duplication of records appears to be quite unnecessary, particularly at a time when attempts are being made to reorganize the District government in the interests of economy and efficiency. But at least this proposed compromise would put the auto-lien swinders out of business.

The Senate made no effort to work out the problem. Senator Truman told his colleagues: "I do not know anything about the recording situation in the District of Columbia and I am not interested in it . . ." Whether or not that reflects the general attitude, the effect of the Senate vote is to perpetuate a racket in the Capital City.

Britain's War Budget

Sir John Simon, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, made no effort to sugar-coat the bitter financial pill he is asking the British nation and people to swallow. His budget for the fiscal year of 1940-41 calls for the expenditure, for war purposes and the ordinary needs of the government, of the staggering sum of £2,677,000,000—$9,344,000,000 at the current New York exchange rate for sterling.

War has always been an expensive enterprise. It is becoming increasingly wasteful. The steep rise in the cost of armed conflict is indicated by the fact that during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1915, a period which included the first eight months of the World War, total British expenditures mounted to £560,473,000. During the first seven months of the present struggle Great Britain has spent for war purposes alone the sum of £905,000,000. And, judging by his current budget, Sir John Simon expects these costs to rise considerably.

Even on the basis of present plans, and with more than half of the cost to be met by borrowing, the direct and immediate burden the British people are now called upon to bear is enormous. The already drastic income tax has not been increased again but this seems largely due to the fact that it is already at almost confiscatory levels. Increased levies are to be imposed on beer, whisky, tobacco, matches and other articles of common use and through the new "purchase tax" the price of everything but food will be materially hit.

The "purchase tax" is a new and ingenious form of sales tax. It will not be directly paid by the ultimate consumer as is the case with most sales taxes. It will apply, instead, to all transactions between wholesalers and retailers. Its obvious purpose is not merely to raise revenue but also to reduce consumption of luxuries so that the nation's economic machinery can be further converted to war needs.

The British government is determined that the present generation shall pay a large share of the war cost. But, despite the back-breaking taxes, the debt load is rapidly increasing. The British people are not whimpering. While Sir John Simon's budget was not greeted with cheers, neither did it produce dismay. There is a resolute determination to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion, cost what it may. What that cost will mean—in permanent alteration of British living standards and economic organization—none can predict, except to say that it will involve a very different England.

A Borrowed Battlefield

Behind the fog of claims and counter-claims regarding the military developments taking place in Norway one grim fact emerges.

Norway is today the principal battlefield of the European war. That once happy and well-ordered land, which wanted nothing except to be let alone to carry on its peaceful pursuits, is today the scene of destruction unparalleled since Poland was laid waste by a German blitzkrieg.

For Great Britain and France there may be mitigating circumstances in Germany's invasion of Norway. It has provided them with a new front. It may enable them to turn the German flank and thus enhance their chances of victory as well as, perhaps, shortening the war. For the time being, at any rate, the very vigor and extent of the fighting in Norway keeps the war away from British and French soil.

The Norwegians can take little comfort in all these circumstances and possibilities. They are fighting with great courage and fortitude because, like their Viking ancestors, they are free men determined to defend their homes and hearths against the invader. But their homes are being destroyed, their towns ravished, many of their fellow countrymen shot down, others subjected to a regime akin to slavery. No matter what happens, it will be years before the ravages of the war in Norway will be repaired.

Norway today is a borrowed battlefield. The struggle which now centers in that highly civilized Scandinavian land was not of Norway's making. Norway has been at peace for a long, long time. She was wedded to the concept of neutrality. She dealt even-handedly with both sides. But neither her record of peace and decency nor her impeccable conduct saved her. She is the innocent victim of the breakdown of the international order. And she may not be the last victim.

Visitor's Troubles

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "The Visitor's Industry," of April 16, evokes the protest from one of them: and what are you doing to make visiting possible? Where can the visitor put the noble steed that has brought him to the sacred city? Here Washington admits that it earns $60,000,000 a year out of visitors, and yet not even our fortified military zones are so much hedged in by restrictions as the streets of Washington.

No more "No Parking" signs ever beset the steering wheels of a goggle-eyed world than here. Was there ever a more cock-eyed situation in a modern, efficiency and speed-crazy world upon which the brakes of backwardness had clamped their "Don'ts"?

I went down the other day with my car to the Pan American Union. Before I was able to find a single hole into which I could possibly crawl, I had circled several times around the Washington Monument, passed miles of unused thoroughfare, and finally landed up at the Capitol. I'm almost afraid to let this information out lest Washingtonians discover that one wee opening in the red-network of "No Parking" signs and that that one hole be plugged up forever. Efficiency? A modern world in which the only thing that really works—a car—doesn't get a chance to rest or work.

Since you will not give me an entire issue, I'll be brief. Grievances? First, that wonderful, ingenious device—the green arrow. These arrows—unique in all America—make one think the police are merely thumbing their nose at pedestrian and driver alike. I clutched a woman and a little child out of the traffic because a red light indicated they might cross but a green light, pointing the other way, told a driver to turn right and she was nearly run down. Now, who the brilliant inventor of the green arrow was, is not known. Why can't he invent a portable parking space so that each visitor might bring along his own?

And so as to this parking, or no parking, system—the money spent on signs and green arrows in Washington would buy parking lots for visitors who pay $60,000,000 a year for the privilege of keeping moving. If Washington bought up its sidewalks, which nobody ever uses because everyone is sitting in a car which never may stop rolling, and narrowed down these useless sidewalks to the lone, stray pedestrian certain to be knocked down somewhere anyway, and then made everyone park at an angle to the curb—some one of the millions of visitors might be able to get out somewhere to see the cherry blossoms or a public monument now and then. Or is it that the city merely wants to sell more gasoline? Otherwise, why not put up signs "Keep Rolling" instead of "No Parking"? At least, that is positive help.

"Reckless Step" In The House

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As commander of the American Veterans Association, permit me to congratulate you in the name of 17,000 World War veterans for your courageous editorial in The Post of April 21, taking a stand against pensioning all of the dependents of all World War veterans, irrespective of the cause of the former soldiers' death.

All that is needed to stop this continued raiding of the Treasury by the lobbyists for predatory veterans' organizations is publicity. When enough people know just what is being done to their country and to them, the Congressmen who are supinely following the so-called veteran (21 days' service, war training camp) John Rankin, will begin to hear from "back home." To the present time these Congressmen have heard from legion-inspired sources and very little from John Taxpayer. Your editorial, therefore, is a patriotic act and most timely.

When this legion pension bill (H. R. 9000) comes to the floor of the House for a vote—about May 15—a demand should be made for a roll call vote. Of course, Mr. Rankin and Mr. John Taylor, of the American Legion, will desire nothing of the sort for obvious reasons. But the country is entitled to know just what Representatives vote the ventriloquisms of the American Legion lobby and those who have the courage to say "No" to further largesse of billions to special classes. Then, in November, we shall know what to do about it.

It is ironical that of the three courageous men in the House who voted to knock this measure off the unanimous consent calendar, two of them are veterans and both members of the American Legion. Representative Miller, of Connecticut, lost both legs in service and Representative Kean, of New Jersey, is the holder of the Distinguished Service Cross. The chief howler for the measure, Mr. Rankin, never smelled anything stronger than face powder in 1918.

Universal pensions for every veteran and dependent are not inevitable, as so many believe. The temper of our people is growing shorter every day as the mounting deficit costs are made known. With national defense appropriations becoming greater as the war spreads from country to country, it is necessary that Mr. Rankin and Mr. Taylor endeavor to rush this stuff upon the statute books before the American people really know what is going on.

Well they know that no pension legislation has been repealed, and that once this general pension legislation is saddled upon us it will remain there and grow in amount without further legislation, for death of the veterans automatically brings more and more widows upon the rolls.

We do not believe that this law has been fully explained to the members of the legion. Most of them are patriotic citizens, and in their posts are doing a fine civic job. It is the lobbyists of the legion in Washington, who have salaried jobs, who are interested in forcing legislation carrying more and more financial benefits. Thousands of legionnaires all over the United States do not subscribe to raiding their fellow citizens, and those of the legion who fully realize just what this H. R. 9000 would do to the country are against it.

It may be significant that of the 218 members of the House who signed Mr. Rankin's petition to bring this bill to the floor, less than one-half of the signers were veterans. It is still more significant that not one-half of the veterans in the House signed the petition, even counting Mr. Rankin as a veteran.

We hope that The Post will continue to bring to the attention of its readers—and Congress—the dangers inherent in this properly designated "Reckless Step."

Congressional Salaries

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago the papers reported that a Mr. Labert St. Clair, Washington writer, in a speech before the American Pen Women, advocated raising the salaries of Congressmen to $15,000 or $20,000. While the salary at present is $10,000 with all the allowances for clerk hire, etc., and exclusive of the rental value of the offices furnished them, a Congressman costs the taxpayers about $25,000 a year.

While there are many good and capable men in Congress many of them are not worth their present salary, and probably never made anywhere near that amount in private life, the majority of them being unsuccessful lawyers who made a profession of politics for what was in it financially.

Instead of any salary at all better results would be obtained if members were allowed only a very liberal expense account, while in actual attendance upon the sessions together with mileage to and from their homes. This would have many beneficial results. It would undoubtedly bring to Congress a higher type of men, who would seek the honor and the opportunity patriotically to serve the best interests of their country instead of seeking the office for the emoluments, as is now the case in many instances. Furthermore, instead of wasting time in endless and often useless discussions as at present such a Congress would attend strictly to business so as to return to their homes and occupations, thus shortening the sessions to the benefit of the country at large, because the business interests are always jittery and uncertain during sessions of Congress, which is not good for the Nation.

My impression is that members of the British Parliament were not paid anything at one time, and at present are paid only $1,500, with the result that its membership is superior in type and ability on the whole to our Congress.

Dewey Oratory

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What worries the dizzy dealers more than anything else is not Tom Dewey's amateur status, his inexperience, limitation of field of action or other bugaboos the public-fund-retained phrase-makers may cook up to deceive the more gullible of the electorate.

What worries these dealers is that Tom Dewey, present No. 1 aspirant, has a smoothness of oratorical delivery which voice experts have pronounced superior (though some disagreement prevails) to that owned by the "voice in the White Mansion." That's why he's the outstanding aspirant. Even their own long calender of bungles, and the chance that the electorate may wake up in time to evaluate them properly, is lost in their play upon this new fear.

Dewey's platform delivery has a vitality and sincerity that lifts his statements out of the realm of glossed political bunk, of politics played with human misery, of pledges used as ladders to power and cast aside at the first moment deemed expedient.

"He can't go wrong before a mike—wherever he talks they'll go out and vote for him," they used to say of Roosevelt. Now the same is true of his opponent. No wonder panic exists in the New Deal camp.

The Post Impressionist

Book Review

It has come to the point, I am afraid, that I must apologize to the United States Government, because for some time now I have been accusing Uncle Sam of having no sense of humor. And everybody knows there is no insult quite so insidious as that.

But recently I came upon a book that astonished me as a deliberate projection of humor by an agency of the Federal Government—an overt act perpetrated with unabashed gusto by some brilliant mind or minds, so far as I know, lost in anonymity. Although it was published 26 years ago, in February, 1904, it seems like a beacon of hope, for what has happened can happen again.

The book was issued at the Government Printing Office, the largest printing establishment in the world. It is entitled "Specimen Book and Catalogue: Showing Faces of the Body and Job Types, Borders, Ornaments, Brass Rule, Cuts, Etc., Now in Stock in the Job Room of This Office." As anyone can see, it must have been a very important volume to the printers, editors, and literati of the Government service.

Several G. P. O. type books have since appeared, but none like the 1904 edition. It was the magnum opus, against which all later ones were dull and prosaic. You will know, for example, if you know type books, that there is nothing more monotonous than to see "ABC DEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ-1234567890abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz" printed over and over for each font of type. Even such worthy excerpts as "WHEN IN THE COURSE OF HUMAN EVENTS, IT BECOMES NECESSARY FOR ONE PEOPLE," etc., are not very inspiring when repeated ad infinitum. But the frivolous printers of 1904 let their hair down, and in 10-point Cadmus Old Style we read this fine specimen:

"A FARMER WAS RIDING ALONG THE ROAD with a jug filled with sorghum tied by a strap to his saddle-horn. A cyclone came up, and when it had passed the jug handle was discovered inside the jug and the strap was sticking out of the jug's mouth, the jug having been blown inside-out without spilling a drop of the molasses or in any manner loosening the strap from the horn of the saddle 123456 7890."

The subject changes violently, and a lesson in love-making greets the reader in 8-point Compressed: "ALL GIRLS LIKE TO BE LOVED, BUT THEY ARE NOT ALL alike, and care should be taken to use discrimination among the many varieties. In making love to an old maid, only the preliminaries are necessary. Give her a fair start and she will do the rest. Remember she is making up for lost time. As long as she has taken the cue, don't fear the result. You needn't do a thing, it's not 246."

The editors of the book maintained a golden balance, and turning over the page we read the precious bons mots in 8-point Dorit: "A MAN SHOULD NOT ALLOW HIMSELF TO HATE EVEN HIS ENEMIES because if you indulge this passion on some occasions, it will rise of itself on others." Homily, however, soon yields to such profound observations as this, in 18-point Slope Gothic: "MAN WANTS BUT LITTLE HERE BELOW, BUT HE WANTS IT OFTEN."

Should you want to see a sample of 22-point Old Style Italic, this would be it: "MOTHER, MAY I go out to swim? Yes, my darling daughter. Hang your clothes on a mulberry bush, but don't go near the water. Then you won't get wet."

Sheer exuberance breaks out in 24-point Ronaldson Extended: "CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH was saved from death at the stake by the beautiful Indian maiden Pocahontas. Hurrah for Poca!"

History marches on in beautiful 30-point Post Old Style: "PONCE DE LEON FOUND, as he thought, the fountain of youth in Florida. If he had come further north and settled in Foggy Bottom, he might have been living yet."

And so on for 184 pages, including index. This book, I submit, should be a collector's item. It contains everything—pathos, humor, information per se, poetry, religion, description, travel, fiction, nonsense. It is an electric tour-de-force.

It demonstrates how someone at our own Government Printing Office was able to throw light into dullness, to make a prosaic, utilitarian type catalogue a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It may be that the man who conceived it is still alive. If so, I salute him.

I would not trade my copy of this book for the famous 5-foot shelf. When I get to thinking too much about what a mess the world is in today, it may help me regain my balance. On page 112, in 36-point Tiffany Script, there is this brief reassuring note: "The Russians and Japanese went to war after this book was begun; that accounts for the lack of war stories 1234."

PAUL H. OEHSER.

D. C. Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The local press reports the D. C. tax office statement that out of approximately 2,750 corporation tax returns (D. C.) approximately 1,600 show no taxable income!

This situation if passed on to Presidential Aspirant Thomas E. Dewey, would perhaps alter his balmy conception of Washington as a boom town, as expressed by him in a recent speech.

Entirely apart from the above, however, in the light of this report by our local officials, it would seem high time for Congress to step on the gas in the matter of amending the D. C. unemployment tax law. All of this tax, which has now resulted in a surplus of between $17,000,000 and $20,000,000, comes out of the employers' cans.

It would seem that with three out of every five corporations showing no taxable income, some of this excess impounded "jack" ought to stay in the business channels where it belongs and is well needed.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The American Blackout

IF THIS were not an election year, public men would no doubt be examining seriously, frankly and without partisanship the subject of American national defense. Beyond both our oceans there are wars, and the question is how the security of the United States is to be maintained. The security of a nation is a matter about which there can be no trifling: it is the highest responsibility with which the leaders of a people are charged. This responsibility they must exercise without fear or favor, with the utmost regard for the consequences to the nation and with no regard whatever for the consequences to themselves, their careers, their conveniences, and their personal advantage.

In the great hours of history no lower or meaner standard is respectable in public life. Yet the plain fact is that not a single public man who aspires to guide this country's destiny has ventured to take the people into his confidence. There is none who talks to them as a man to other men, none who is saying what he really believes, none who is not trying to say what he imagines the people would like to hear. The American electorate is being treated by its politicians as if it were a fat, lazy, self-indulgent monarch surrounded by flattering courtiers. In the end Americans are not going to like that. They will be ashamed of this period in their history as they are ashamed of the Harding era and some few others when the public morals were low and even good men were afraid to be true.

BOYS WILL be boys, I suppose; this, we are reminded, is an election year. No doubt. But it happens also to be a year in which it may be decided whether America is to live on in the inviolable security of its great past or whether for lack of lucidity and courage in its leaders Americans are to be condemned to live dangerously for generations to come, their liberties mortgaged by their insecurity. Yet the politicians, who would lead us, appear to be unanimous in feeling that it would not be expedient to discuss these matters now. I do not agree with them. I think that this Nation is better than these politicians think it is, and I think these politicians are behaving irresponsibly because they feel themselves to be unequal to the responsibilities of the hour.

THERE ARE the Republican politicians. They believe, perhaps correctly, that if once they admitted that the wars beyond the two oceans may impair radically the traditional security of America, they would have to debate with the President in a field where he has shown greater foresight than they have and on matters about which he is immeasurably better informed. Yet this is an absurd predicament for the Republican Party which, by all the traditions of its long history, should be most vigilantly aware of, should most jealously guard, the fundamental bases of American security. The truth is that the Republican Party has let itself be led by the nose into a position where its candidates do not dare, because on the party's record of foreseeing nothing they cannot afford it, to face the test of whether they are fit and ready to take responsibilities in a time when there is war, and the threat of more wars, on both sides of our world.

That is why Mr. Dewey, for example, is following his own personal interest when, contrary to his previous convictions and his utterances, he now seeks to give the impression that the campaign must be conducted on the assumption that even to consider the effects of these wars in Europe and Asia is to drag the country into them. Mr. Dewey is not defining his foreign policy when he says this: he is defining his campaign policy for avoiding the question of whether he is suited to conduct American foreign policy. He shrinks from that question, and with reason. For if Mr. Dewey's party were to recognize that foreign policy and national defense are bound to dominate all other questions during the next administration, what likelihood is there that they would wish to select as their candidate for President a young man whose brief public experience consists in having been for a few years a good prosecuting attorney in the City of New York? It would seem like inviting the successful and popular captain of the Staten Island ferryboat to become the commanding admiral of the United States Navy.

THE DEMOCRATIC politicians, headed by Mr. Roosevelt himself, are also in a quandary of their own making. For while the President has no interest in concealing his concern about foreign affairs, he is in no favorable position to engage in a discussion of how well the New Deal has prepared the country at home to deal with the dangers which he has correctly anticipated abroad. I am not referring to the rather academic question of giving more or less help to the Allies; I am referring to the fact that if the threat to American security is as great and as imminent as, obviously, Mr. Roosevelt does think it is, then his domestic policies are in many vital respects indefensible.

The United States is, for example, appropriating large sums of money for the Navy. A searching inquiry into the practical difficulties of constructing the Navy under the conditions which govern labor and capital in the New Deal would startle the country. The fact is, it would seem, that the strength of the Navy relative to Japan's navy alone, disregarding all the European navies, is declining, and on present prospects the position in 1941 will be worse than it is today. The state of our Army is simply deplorable, measured not by any fantastic notion of sending another army to Europe but by the elementary needs of national defense in this hemisphere. Except perhaps in aviation, where an expansion of facilities is being subsidized by the Allies, our armament industry is not even partially adequate to support a third-rate war.

It is all very well, therefore, for the President to foresee the seriousness of our own position in the world today. But how is he to reconcile his estimate of the danger with the lackadaisical, disorganized boondoggling which he tolerates in place of a serious effort to strengthen the national defense? Mr. Dewey may be the captain of a ferry boat aspiring to be admiral of the fleet. But Mr. Roosevelt is an admiral of the fleet who has encouraged a laxity of discipline and a kind of aimless frivolity in the crew which might just be not too dangerous in an excursion boat on a holiday.

If Mr. Dewey is like a ferryboat captain wanting to be an admiral, Mr. Roosevelt is like an admiral with the indulgence of an excursion boat skipper

AS A MATTER of fact the Republican politicians do not wish to discuss foreign policy and national defense because none of their avowed candidates has any experience or proved ability in the field. And the Democratic politicians, though they have a rather better record of having foreseen the events, would be most awfully vulnerable if there were a Republican of sufficient caliber and structure to ask them what they have done and what they are doing to make their country as strong as they think its position is dangerous. That is why the Democrats have as little stomach for a serious discussion of the national defense as have the Republicans. For whereas the Republicans have no one "available" who also has experience, the Democrats have a record of not having prepared the country adequately to deal with the situation which they have foreseen.

That is why the American people find themselves in this extraordinary predicament where no public man who has high responsibility, or aspires to exercise high responsibility, is telling them one single important thing that he and his advisers think privately about the future of American security in an exceedingly turbulent world. Never before, so far as I know, have the immediate interests of politicians caused them to establish what is, in effect, a total blackout of serious discussion in the crucial areas of public policy.

BUT THAT is the fact. And the reason for the blackout is not, as some suppose, that public opinion is demoralized by sentimentality and propaganda. The demoralization exists, to be sure. But the cause of the demoralization is that the politicians in both parties, on each side for their own special reasons, do not dare to go to the people and invite them to examine the situation. The politicians do not know whether the disqualifications of the Republican candidates or the missed opportunities and negligence of the Democratic leaders will seem the worse to an awakened electorate. Neither party dares, therefore, to awaken the electorate. And so they have tacitly combined to let the national discipline and the national spirit decompose under the influence of wishful ignorance and sentimental agitation and many forms of subversive and alien intrigue.

THESE POLITICIANS are trifling with the people and they are gambling with the destiny of the United States. They are refusing to inform the people and to guide them in a time when the people's need, as they have rarely needed before, the very best of the mind and the very best of the courage that is in their public men.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

"A Fair Trial"

WILLIAM GREEN is quoted in the papers as having said regarding the arrest of his distinguished colleague, George Scalise, the president of the Building Service Workers' International Union, that he hoped Mr. Scalise would have a fair trial. Mr. Scalise, for the benefit of those who came in late, has been charged with extortion in a prosecution initiated by Tom Dewey and has suggested that he is being martyrized for Dewey's political ambitions.

These dispatches, which from time to time recently have discussed Mr. Scalise's fitness for the office of president of an international union of the A. F. of L., the manner in which he reached that eminence and the salary and other income which he enjoys out of the aggregate contributions of many ill-paid workers, naturally indorse Mr. Green's hope. Mr. Scalise should have a fair trial, and this seems an opportune time to remark to Mr. Green that almost any public court in the United States would be likely to give him a fairer trial than defendants usually receive in the courts of the labor unions.

TO PUT IT another way, if the New York Courts should treat Scalise no better than the little people of the labor unions are treated when they are haled before their superiors to defend themselves for impolite remarks about those individuals, he would have a fine case of persecution with which to go before the people, and public opinion would rally to his defense—not for his own individual sake but for the good of the Republic and the vindication of justice.

In these labor union courts the judges often double in brass as the complaining parties, and the defendants, although they cannot be sent to prison upon conviction, nevertheless are exposed to the most grievous punishment. They may be fined money which they need for the support of their families, and if they get too fresh they may be kicked out of the unions, temporarily or permanently—which means temporary or perpetual annulment of the right to earn a living.

Expulsion from a union is an economic death sentence, because a man expelled from one union is an enemy of labor and ineligible for membership in another. He may be a good union man, too, but the victim of a criminal racketeer or of an arrogant bulldozer of the standard unioneer type.

So while Mr. Green is on the subject of fair trials and his piety is aroused on behalf of a powerful union official who just muscled into control of one of the big internationals of the A. F. of L., it would sound real nice if he would express the same solicitude for the little defendants in the union courts and set some inquiry going into the actual performances of such courts.

THE STOCK answer that each member of a union has the right to appeal to the public courts for redress after he has exhausted the means provided by the union constitutions doesn't carry much weight. There is too much risk that a defendant will develop a broken leg or lose some of his teeth by force and violence while his appeal is pending, and, anyway, the little individual doesn't have the money to take his troubles to the public courts in civil actions. So he pays his little $5 or $10 or $30, and that is justice as the union courts dispense it.

It seems almost unbelievable that a man of Mr. Green's position and experience continues to stall, as he has been doing, in the face of an obvious uprising of rank and file indignation against bad conditions which have been allowed to develop in the A. F. of L. It took the selfless service of many real martyrs and fighters to make the A. F. of L., and Mr. Green, by his stubbornness and political clumsiness in labor affairs, is permitting a situation to develop which may destroy everything.

His first and only comment on the Scalise case is a hope that Scalise will receive a fair trial. This hardly required saying, but, of course, it was all right for him to say it. But when has he expressed a similar interest in fairness in the trials of the little people—his own people—in the courts of the unions?

A Born Host

THERE ARE BORN hosts and born guests, Max Beerbohm once said. Sir William Rothenstein, the English artist, must be a born host. He is a connoisseur of "great talkers," as those who recall the two earlier volumes of his recollections, "Men and Memories," well know. Now appears "Since Fifty: Men and Memories, 1922-1938" (Macmillan, $5), which has the same personal charm as its predecessors.

Sir William knew every one in England, and painted or sketched most of them: Ramsay MacDonald and Austen Chamberlain, Axel Munthe, of San Vitale, and Lawrence of Arabia, Yeats, Shaw, Housman, the explorer; Sir Aurel Stein, the cartoonist Low and a host of lesser men. Apparently, he liked them all equally and uncritically, and expected them all to know and like each other. He expressed astonishment that Kipling, having been in India, did not know Tagore; though, in the geography of the spirit, Tagore surely was antipodean to Kipling. Yet all these men obviously loved Rothenstein; the rich quarry of their letters, in which he mines for his memoirs, proves that Max Beerbohm was a frequent visitor at Rothenstein's home; he hit off Rothenstein's universal assent in a rhyme which Rothenstein's rebellious children often quoted at their father:

"How do you do?" Will asked of me.
"Very well, thanks," said I. Said he:
"Yes, I invariably find Abundant health in all mankind."

Next morning, "How'd you do?" asked Will.
I told him I was rather ill.
"Alas," his voice tolled like a bell,
"Mankind was ever far from well."

Max Beerbohm was always furtively stalking about a room, closing windows when nobody was looking; he hated drafts and feared all outdoors. He had never heard a lark. Once, when the larks were singing, other guests at Sir William's home insisted that Max go out to hear them. It took Beerbohm an hour to bundle up for the ordeal. When he got out the larks had ceased singing.

ROTHENSTEIN'S MEMOIRS are full of such pictures: Of Housman, stiff in his starched collars, even in the country; of W. H. Hudson, afraid of death, burning his unfinished manuscripts; of Lord Robert Cecil, wearing shirts frayed at collars and cuffs, such as only a great aristocrat would dare reveal; of Austen Chamberlain, confessing that he had never been able to finish Tolstoi's "War and Peace;" of W. B. Yeats, launched on a great monologue about Swift, Berkeley and Ireland, while the historian Trevelyan vainly tried to interrupt because Yeats' facts and dates were wrong; of Augustus John, the academic painter, looking at Epstein's massive statue of Christ and murmuring one word: "Imponderable."

Sir William takes great men seriously. He was impressed, attending the funeral of Thomas Hardy in Westminster Abbey, to observe the pallbearers: Earl Baldwin, Ramsay MacDonald, Barrie, Shaw, Kipling, Housman, Gosse, Galsworthy and some clerics; he decided to paint the scene, and was astonished when Housman and Barrie refused to pose for the purpose. He quotes, rather as a curiosity, Col. Lawrence's angry letter, sent from Karachi:

"I regret Hardy's funeral service . . . These sleek deans and canons were acting a lie behind his name. Hardy was too great to be suffered as an enemy of their faith: so he must be redeemed . . . I wish these black-suited apes could once see the light with which they shine."

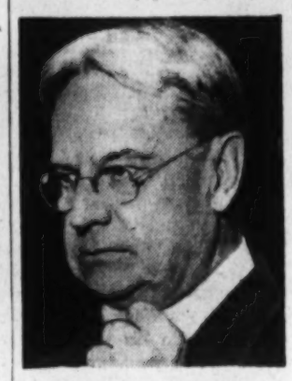
The "Washington Atmosphere"

IF WE WERE to distill that intangible thing that is often called "the atmosphere of Washington," the larger part of it might be described as: The impact of the war abroad upon our domestic politics.

The influence of the war comes in several forms. Most obvious is the more serious turn the war has taken, and hence the increase in discussion, always latent, of whether we may be involved. In such discussion, one distinction is emerging. It is the distinction between what President Roosevelt called "military participation," or



SENATOR JOHNSON
Some argue that the act bearing his name, which forbids private loans to nations already in debt to the United States, should now be repealed

"the sending of American youth to fight on the soil of Europe," and, on the other hand, measures short of that. That we will never send a conscripted army to Europe is a practically universal belief. This almost nobody advocates, or even suggests, or thinks likely.

But, short of that, there is a wide gamut of steps which are discussed as at least having possibility of happening. Among them are: Repeal of the Johnson Act, which now prevents loans from private American sources to the Allies; repeal of that part of the neutrality law which now prevents private sources from selling supplies to the Allies on credit; repeal of that part of the neutrality law which now prevents private American merchant ships from going to Allied ports.

TO SAY these ideas are discussed is by no means to suggest they are intended. No group of any size now advocates them. None of them today would command a majority in Congress, nor even a materially large vote. The discussion of them takes place as speculation about what might conceivably happen in the future. But talk about them takes place, and is a contribution to the subdued anxiety which constitutes the current atmosphere of Washington.

Another form in which the impact of war affects the Washington state of mind is Secretary Hull's note of warning to Japan against going into the Dutch East Indies. This, and our entire relation to Japan, becomes more talked about in proportion as there is increasing apprehension of Germany entering Holland as she entered Norway. Such an action by Germany would raise a concrete and immediate problem for us, as respects not only the Dutch possessions in the East Indies, but also nearer home in the West Indies. The Dutch West Indies would become a concern to us, just as Danish-owned Greenland became a concern when Germany seized Denmark. About Secretary Hull's note to Japan, it can be said that one of the steadying influences in the Washington scene is the general confidence in Mr. Hull.

Another contribution to the Washington atmosphere, arising from the war, is Mr. Roosevelt's apparent disposition to—let us put it—not refrain from allusion to the war as a factor in domestic politics. More than once, he has taken notice, with a manner of irritation, of utterances of war policy made by Republican candidates for the party's Presidential nomination. Perhaps "Republican candidates" is too broad a term. Practically every one thinks it is Mr. Thomas E. Dewey whom Mr. Roosevelt has in mind when he says, as in his message to the Young Democrats last Saturday:

"We are keeping out of the wars . . . but I do not subscribe to the preachment of a Republican aspirant for the Presidency who tells you in effect that the United States . . . should do nothing to try to bring about a better order . . . of world peace when the time comes."

Mr. Roosevelt's allusion to the war, the Republican allusions which provoke Mr. Roosevelt's, and the apparent likelihood that the war and our relation to it may be an issue in the campaign—all that composes the link between war and our domestic politics. If that link did not exist, if our domestic politics could be isolated and seen as a thing standing alone—in that event, hardly ever was domestic politics more simple.

LAST YEAR, before the war began, when President Roosevelt and those about him began to look forward to the campaign year 1940; when he began his policy of silence as to whether or not he would run again—the chief reason given by New Dealers for Mr. Roosevelt's silence was that he would thus be able to retain influence over Congress. In the past it has been accepted that a President serving his second term tends to lose influence in Congress as the time of his leaving the White House approaches. This has been true, partly because Congress foresees the time when the President will not have patronage, or other form of prestige, to bestow or withhold. Another reason is that members of the President's own party in Congress normally know that he will not again head the party in an election; hence they are free to criticize him, or decline to accept his leadership, without fear of being embarrassed by running on the same ticket with him.

It was to offset these conditions that the New Dealers, in the beginning, before the war began, promoted the notion that Mr. Roosevelt might run again.

Hardly ever has reality so completely departed from expectation. Hardly ever was there a Congress that so ignored a President's leadership. Hardly ever was there the equivalent of what happened last week. Congress, by practically 3-to-1 majority (279 to 97) passed a measure, the Walter-Logan bill, which the President had publicly said he opposed. In this ignoring of the President's desire, more than half his own party joined.

Plainly, domestic politics, as a reason, for the President's silence about running again, or as a justification for actually running again, has turned out disappointingly.

The Liftie Shoe Marches Proudly Into Summer

Although the wedge shoe has created more controversy than any other type of footwear, its response locally has been rousing, a triumph for those who believed in its comfort and foreshortening advantages. Here are shown three of its most popular versions for summer.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Should an expectant mother eat foods containing iron?

Yes, and she should also sometimes take pure iron in addition to iron-containing foods.

Among the most important results of the recent intensive interest in the study of blood conditions has been to show the frequency of a certain type of anemia in pregnant women due to iron deficiency. It is part of the routine job of an obstetrician when he first examines an expectant mother to make an examination of the blood, and this should be done at frequent intervals during the entire progress of the pregnancy. This is one of the important duties of the modern doctor in carrying out what is known as prenatal care.

The public should be educated in this and the mother should cooperate with the doctor by submitting to monthly visits so that her condition may be checked frequently during the period she is carrying the child.

Does exposure to sunlight add anything to the body?

Sunlight definitely has an effect on the body. The sun's rays are the greatest source of energy known. The green leaves of the vegetables are the most efficient trap for this energy, and when we eat green vegetables and fruit, we acquire by indirect methods some of the sun's energy. This, however, should always be supplemented by exposure to the sun itself.

Man was supposed to live in the sun. It actually creates food. Experiments have shown that when guinea pigs are given a prepared food which lacks several elements necessary for maintaining life and health, and are kept in the dark on this diet, they grow deformed and crippled. But if they are placed in the sunlight for half an hour, even though they are on this same diet, they grow in a healthy way; the bones grow well and no crippling occurs.

The ultraviolet rays of sunlight are a very efficient, vitalizing agent. Pneumonia, influenza and other infections are most prevalent in the geographical regions where sunlight is absent a large part of the time.

Perforated 'Liftie' Shoes Previewed

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor

ARABESQUES from the near East, Victorian scrolls and a very modern World's Fair theme supplied inspiration for the largest group of wedges yet seen in Washington. Every type of "liftie" imaginable, and some far beyond imagination, were on parade this week at a cocktail party given in honor of this shoe of the year.

Fashion experts, radio commentators and almost everyone in Washington style coordination circles turned out in their best bibs, tuckers and lifties to preview the advance summer and fall wedge, presented by a store whose enthusiasm for this shoe is already famous around town.

Designed by Craftsman

Outstanding in this group were the Fall Forecasts, some designed especially for this showing by Fred Ullman, a shoe craftsman. Some of the Ullman originals cost as high as $1,000 per design, although in their practical autumn versions they will be sold at modicum prices.

Among the forecast styles were lifties of crystal and lucite "glass," carved in Victorian and Araby scrolls,—in and under—for support, or with World Fair perisphere holes ventilating the wedge. These perforations, incidentally, are lighter in weight and on the foot, and yet give adequate support to "weak ankles." In fact, the shoe which received most favorable attention for combined good looks and practicality was the zephyr liftie in summery suede, either in cool pastels or in black piped with bright color. This is a strap sandal, open-toed and with most of the lift carved and cut out for ventilation.

Sales Are Gaining

A highlight announced by the organization presenting these shoes is that 30 per cent of their sales have been on lifties and that this figure may be topped by over 50 per cent of all shoe sales as summer sets in. The club-footed, heavy heeled wedge will probably disappear by the summer, too, with more open perforations forming designs in the wedge itself.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 24.

TIMES SQUARE, New York, where the bright lights are, is normally nutty, and is inhabited and visited by many who are slightly off their rockers. But the area seems to go even madder when Whoopee Lupe Velez arrives to play a theater date as a puller-inner with a new movie, for the little Mex is one of the typhoons of her time.

ALICE HUGHES

Right now Lupe is most excited about having sold a movie story in which she is to star, although as she herself says, "I can't even spell English—except 'I love you' and the swear words." Well, those cover many an emergency. She is always accompanied by a couple of these rodent-like and shivering Mexican hairless pooches, which give me the creeps and send me shuddering out of the Velez dressing room. A cute brassy minx, this Velez, owner of fabulous jewels and fur coats—but not a lady to see too much of if you incline to be neurotic. She is very wearing indeed, especially on this nerves-ridden New Yorker.

As you probably know, her personal appearances consist of mimicry, and probably the cruelest in history. Mimicry is too gentle a word for Lupe's "art"—her portraits are bitter burlesques. Right now, during her current stay, she is doing one of the present German leader, but doing it only backstage or for pals at her hotel. For the paying customers out front she is also demonstrating the rhumba and another number filled with the "bumps"—which is incendiary, for when Velez bumps, she bumps hard.

She's betting she never marries again, the stormy alliance with Johnny Weismuller having convinced her that she and matrimony are no go. But you never can tell about the Loop. Her extended romance with Gary Cooper was another tornado, and ended up with the Montana string bean in Africa.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—What a place this is. Last week we had rain at 9:30 one evening, snow at 10:30, and bright sunshine at 7:30 next morning. That, I suppose, is what a Californian would call "unusual weather." Anyhow, we thought it was.

A rising fashion name to jot down on your cuff is Brigance, who has come to us from Texas by way of Paris. He specializes in sportswear and play clothes. Brigance has a pet stunt, too—dressing the ladies for moonlight bathing. For this romantic sport he designs gleaming white swim suits, and they are even a bit more daring than the usual days suits, which are skimpy enough these days, gosh knows.

What Country Needs Is More Playgrounds

Outdoor Sports Are Aid to Mind As Well as Body

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT THIS country needs is more playgrounds for adults. That has been proved, and conclusively, at the new Long Island play park in which no children are allowed! On the opening day, nearly 2,000 men and women—many of them middle-aged—tried out the kiddie cars, scooters, pogo sticks, stilts and extra size tricycles.

And when they trudged home, park attendants remarked later, the average age of the crowd seemed to have dropped miraculously. They looked more animated, much younger! How account for it? That is simple! They had been getting a taste of what real recreation should be like: a combination of exercise and sheer fun, with the accent on fun.

Cares Go Away

Of course, you are getting good exercise when you are jouncing up and down on a pogo stick! But it's not your liver you are thinking about—it's your equilibrium! And the chances that you can give any serious attention to the everyday worries of living are very remote, indeed!

That is what real recreation should do for us—and we don't get much of the right kind. What do we do when the day's work is done? Just about the same thing we have been doing all day! We sit—either on the sidelines to watch a champion athlete perform, or at a few games of bridge, or through a double feature.

And, most likely, we worry. If we play tennis or badminton, we explain beforehand that "it has been years" since we've held a racquet! But we expect ourselves to perform like a Helen Jacobs or an Alice Marble! We keep seeing ourselves from the side lines—and we wince at our bad shots.

Not Recreation

And when we do take up exercise (knowing that it is "the best thing in the world" for us!), it is apt to be a deadly dull and serious business. The business woman goes nightly to a gymnasium and keeps in condition. But she doesn't get any fun out of it—it's just a chore. She can work out on the horizontal bars and plan an advertising campaign at the same time! And the housewife can do her little set of ups-and-downs with her mind on what to have for dinner—and never miss a count!

Well . . . those things don't add up to recreation! You will get double hte returns if you take your keeping fit program lightly. Relax when you take up tennis again . . . nobody really cares whether you exhibit championship form! And when you do your daily dozen, don't grit your teeth and say, "Just 140 more times" and then this will be over for the day—forget about counting, and you might easily overstep your quota and do 180 times! It wouldn't hurt if you did!

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Meeting His Children, Girl's Love for Widower Loses Some of Its 'Glory;' Should They Marry?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 32 years old, and for four months I have been engaged to be married to a widower, 43 years of age, who has a son and daughter, aged 19 and 20 years, respectively. Since becoming engaged, I have seen quite a lot of these youngsters and I can't help feeling that my fiance is the classic "doting father" in his relationship to them.

While he himself is of admirable character, he seems to lack courage and strength in handling his children and their various problems. I have lost a little of my great respect for him, since observing him in relation to his children; and worse yet, my initial romantic feeling for him (which was really glorious) has faded.

During our year's courtship, I had seen the children very little and had scarcely thought of him as a father. And as I have never been married before, I do desperately want to make a real success of our contemplated "new life." Tell me frankly, Miss Haworth, are the chances against lasting happiness with a widower too great, when his present life is so full of memories of the past? I am depending upon your clear thinking advice.

REGULAR READER.

Golden Opportunity for Woman of Mature Mind

DEAR R. R.: It seems plain that you simply haven't the mature understanding to appreciate the superior quality of your fiance's attitude toward his children. Had he showed himself to be an "admirable character" and a "romantic" figure in his dealings with you, and at the same time conducted himself as the "heavy parent"—the "don't-say-me-nay" dictator—in his relations with them, I would be inclined to think he was putting something over on you; putting a deceptive best-foot-forward, as the saying goes.

I hold it altogether to his credit that he shows himself capable of infinite patience and inexhaustible affection when required to struggle—baffled widower fashion—with his children and their problems during these most difficult years of their transition from adolescence into adulthood. This is the time if all times when a really intelligent wife—preferably the blood mother of his children—would give him (and them) the support and guidance that is needed by the trio, in negotiating safe transport through the rapids, rocks and shallows that characterize this last lap of youth's progress into young manhood and womanhood.

I think you have less to fear in marrying him than he has to fear in marrying you. With your attitude what it is at present—namely, more romantically infantile than maturely cooperative—you are not equipped to make either him a good wife or his children a good stepmother, foster-mother or wise, steadfast friend.

It seems evident that you have little love to give these youngsters; that you are prepared, indeed, to resent their presence in their father's scheme of things, and their normally selfish demands upon his time, attention and affection. In other words, you, the bride-to-be, evaluate your fiance's closest kin as rivals, killjoys and the twin blight on the frail flower of Romance. And don't think your essential attitude, however artfully camouflaged, will be lost on them. Maybe they know already how you feel, and are behaving more outrageously than usual, for the purpose of dismaying you out of your marrying intent; or simply as an instinctive retort-discourteous.

Your fiance has social and affectional obligations to his children which an ideal second wife would never dream of superseding. And unless you can take his obligations in your psychological stride, to the point where you can be happy sharing with him the responsibilities and perplexities presented by his two obstreperous offspring, you should do him the favor of releasing him from the engagement; of foresightedly declining to add to his harassment.

I imagine, however, that he would make what is known as "a wonderful husband" for the woman who is big enough, in character, imagination, sympathy and tenderness, to "swing" the extremely interesting job he has to offer. But for a woman whose outlook on life and love and human beings is so limited as to conceive of Romance only in terms of a carefree sweetheart bending the knee to her, I fancy the job would be entirely too much.

In which classification do you think you belong? In the latter category, at the moment, I think. But it's possible you could grow out of it, and reap the rewards of being a larger kind of person, if you can bring an open heart and mind to the proposition he offers. By way of a beginner, I suggest that you read an article by Dr. Paul Popenoe, entitled, "Romance Can Wreck You," which appears in the December, 1939, issue of Your Life magazine.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Straight Hair, Curls Combined In New Hair-Do

The new tailored hair-dos call for a combination of straight hair and soft curls. Hair tends to be straight from crown backward to the neckline. At the forehead, temples and in front of the ears where the hair is brushed up and back, the natural hairline is emphasized and revealed.

This new type of coiffure calls for soft, sleek, shining hair. Brushing is the one trick that will bring out the healthy luster that gives the hair its fundamental beauty. Vigorous brushing stimulates circulation in the scalp. It strengthens hair roots, and gives a smooth look to the coiffure that should have tailored softness as the new tailored suits.

To get the best results from brushing the hair, use two firm brushes with flexible bristles. Bend forward from the waist and brush up from the neckline on both sides simultaneously

Peter Pan Cookies Delight Children at Tea

PETER PAN, the little boy who wouldn't grow up, and who lived in a fascinating world of Indians, pirates and fairies, is continuing to delight and benefit children just as Barrie the author wanted his creation to do. The play, Peter Pan, is being sponsored by the Soroptomist Club as its season's civic project to raise $1,000 to endow a bed for a cardias patient at the Convalescent Home for Children. The production is to be presented by the pupils of Rose Robinson Cohen's Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Art, at the Wardman Park Theater, May 3 and 4.

As a prelude to the play, Mrs. Cohen entertained at a tea recently at her studio. Among the guests were the children who are participating in the play. And the children had their own special cambric tea that most of us were delighted to have when children. There were also Peter Pan cookies that the little ones loved. Mrs. Cohen had these cookies made for the children by her maid. Since they were so crisp and nutritious and just the type of cookie for children's snacks, I obtained the recipe. The following is the recipe.

Peanut Butter Cookies

Sift together 1 cup sifted cake flour and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Combine, creaming thoroughly, ½ cup peanut butter, ¼ cup butter and ½ cup sugar. Add 2 eggs, beating until fluffy after each egg. Add, mixing well 1 cup raisins or dates or figs, or 1 cup of the three combined. Add the sifted ingredients alternately with ¼ cup milk. Drop by teaspoons onto a lightly greased cooky sheet. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 10 minutes or until delicately brown.

Sen. Guffey's Nephew, Miss Larned Wed July 8

Last Bachelor Among Senator's 4 Nephews Will Become Benedict in Ceremony At West Hartford, Conn.; Reception Planned

By Hope Ridings Miller

SENATOR JOSEPH F. GUFFEY'S race in Pennsylvania has been taking its share of the headlines recently, but it's not the only item of special interest in the Guffey family these days. Plans are already under foot for a gathering of the Guffey-Miller clan in West Hartford, Conn., on July 8, when the last bachelor among Senator Guffey's four nephews will become a benedict.

Hope Ridings Miller

A few weeks ago the engagement of Miss Louise Davenport Larned, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Paul Alexander Larned, of West Hartford, Conn., to John Guffey Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Miller, was announced. And now comes word that plans for the wedding have been completed.

St. John's Church in West Hartford, Conn., will be the scene of the ceremony, which will be followed by a large reception at the Hartford Country Club. The three brothers of the prospective bridegroom will be among the wedding attendants. The matron of honor will be Mrs. Joseph F. Guffey Miller, the former Paula Larned, sister of the bride-elect.

Still another member of the Miller family who will be there is Mrs. William Gardner Miller 3rd, the former Miss Molly Hornsby, daughter of Sir Bertram and Lady Hornsby, of Sussex, England. She became a bride last year in England, and after spending a few months in Paris, she and her husband returned to New York to live.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Democratic Women Need a Dining Room To Seat 4,000 Delegates to Study Forum

WHAT THE DEMOCRATIC women need at this time is a dining room as big as the Union Station. Truly Gargantuan are plans for welcoming the 4,200 coming here next week, and the committee has combed the city to find a hall large enough to seat them. But, outside the station, there isn't any. Several years ago, the world power conference did take over the Union Terminal for a mass dinner. But for eating purposes the Democrats have decided to split up into smaller groups of, say, 1,000 each.

NEVER BEFORE have quite so many women converged on the Capital all at once as are coming for this first National Institute of Government. When some time ago Mrs. Roosevelt asked Mrs. Thomas McAllister, of the national committee, how many were expected, the answer was 500 at the most. Reservations have since not only passed the 4,000 mark, but are still pouring in.

One ardent Democrat from South Dakota will transport herself and friends to Washington in a station wagon. A Texas woman has organized a flying squadron, which will charter a plane for the trip.

Another Westerner wrote and said she would like to come but didn't know what to do with her husband. She has finally decided to bring him along.

A fleet of 600 taxis will be marshaled to whisk the women back and forth from round tables and symposia. The hostess committee alone, only one of many, numbers 150. The final meeting will be held at Riverside Stadium. All in all, the convention should be colossal, stupendous and terrific.

The 4,000 will get first-hand information on public affairs from speakers Mrs. Roosevelt, James A. Farley, Harold L. Ickes, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Harry H. Woodring, Robert Jackson, Representative Mary Norton, Nathan Straus, and other bigwigs. Senators and Representatives have promised to attend an 8 a. m. breakfast with the delegates. Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain them at a garden party, weather permitting. But Mrs. McAllister cheerfully said yesterday that if the heavens open the 4,200 will go anyway, wearing raincoats, for "rain can't dampen Democratic spirits."

This is the first time the women of any political party have held a national study meeting of this kind, and the committee is quite overwhelmed by the tremendous response.

ANYONE WHO HAS ever seen a performance in Paris of "La Dame aux Camelias" knows how the theater resounds with the weeping and sniffling of the men in the audience. But I never saw a man cry at a play in this country until the other evening at Robert Sherwood's war opus, "There Shall Be No Night."

Among the packed-jammed audience the other evening were Mr. and Mrs. W. Creighton Peet, Mrs. Peter Belin, up from Miami and accompanied by her brother, Merritt Cootes, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., the Thacher Winslows, just back from Mexico, Henry and Polly Ehrlich, Helen Davis escorted by Denys Smith, and dozens of others.

I wish I were a pundit,
Allowed to sit and think,
Deciding if today the world
Will topple from that brink.

In pondered prose I'd tell you why
It seems the British cabinet and I
Don't quite agree you'd also know
Which way Benito ought to go.

On palsy-walsy terms I'd be
With crisis and catastrophe.
On cataclysm, chaos, such,
I'd turn the magic pundit touch.

White paper, blue book, communique
Don't judge 'till I have had my say.
And if world issues raise a doubt,

Mrs. Robert Benner Gives a Luncheon

Mrs. Robert W. Benner entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in Silver Spring, Md., for Mrs. Thomas Holbrook of Detroit, who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Francis Murray of Kenwood.

Ferber, Mrs. Edwin Roper, Mrs. Lambert Simmons, Mrs. Frederick Walker, all of Washington, and Mrs. C. Bailey Scrimgeour, of Silver Spring.

1812 Daughters Urge Schools to Close Doors and Halls to American Student Union

Resolution Cites Browder's Testimony Before Dies Probe

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

A resolution asking faculties of tax-supported schools and colleges to rescind all charters of the American Student Union and to deny it the facilities of the college buildings, was passed yesterday afternoon at the closing session of the Associate Council of the National Society, United Daughters of 1812.

The resolution points out that the organization was characterized by Earl Browder, in his testimony before the Dies Committee, as the "transmission belt" of the Communist Party, with headquarters in Moscow. The resolution also requests that boards of education in cities where meetings have been held in high schools, deny it permission to use the school buildings and that city councils, boards of education and school authorities take action to rid schools and public institutions of this "anti-American pressure group." The society also went on record as opposed to the growth of both Communist and Fascist propaganda appearing in certain textbooks used in school and colleges.

Dies Committee Inquiry Is Commended

Another resolution approved the work of the Dies Committee and commended the patriotism of its members, in the face of concerted effort to discredit the committee, in bringing to light "all un-American activities, particularly the penetration of Government offices by the communists and all those who would effect a change in our form of government."

The society also protested against a WPA mural painting in the headquarters building of the Second Area, U. S. A. at Governors Island as "a libel on our sires and the United States Army." It charges the painting is a "decided misrepresentation of the conduct of the American soldiers at the Battle of New Orleans." The society will forward a request to officials that the picture be "removed, obliterated or altered so as to give a worthy representation of the history of American soldiers."

N. C. University Alumnae Hear Dr. Jackson

Curricula of women's colleges "should help women as women and not play the same tune as men's colleges," Dr. Walter C. Jackson, dean of the Woman's College of North Carolina University, declared last night.

Addressing a dinner meeting of the Washington Alumnae Club at the Parrot Tea Room, Dr. Jackson, who is dean of administration, discussed the progress of the institution since it was consolidated with the university during the administration of former Gov. O. Max Gardner, now a resident of Washington.

"We are beginning a reexamination of our curriculum, looking toward the problem of women's education," he said. "When women began in business and the professions, their first task was to demonstrate they could do as good a job as men. They have now proved they can whether they go into professions, business or the home, therefore, their education should offer them training that will help them as women, in addition to giving them preparation for their work."

Dr. Jackson said he believed much in the old arts course which produced "educated gentlemen and gentlewomen," but he favored dropping some of the mathematics and ancient languages and substituting social sciences.

Miss Sue Wall Robertson, president of the club, introduced him. He also told of the scholarship students who have been assisted by the fund maintained by the Washington club.

Mrs. Hugh Brenton, jr., was chairman of the dinner. Among the guests were former faculty members and their wives, including Dr. and Mrs. L. Edwin Yoctum, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Kiker, Dr. and Mrs Fred Morrison, Dr Wallace Nygard, Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Blauch and Mrs. Mae Thompson Evans.

Cleora Wheeler Urges Artists to Put Their Talents to Test in Various Media

EVERY ART STUDENT should be encouraged to put his training to use in various media, in the opinion of Miss Cleora Wheeler, one of the successful artist members of the National League of American Pen Women and president of the Minnesota branch. Miss Wheeler believes that the artist has a mission to give beauty to the world but at the same time should see to it that his talent yields him an income.

She puts her preaching into practice, applying her gift for design in various ways. Although she is most widely known for her bookplates, she also does silhouettes by photography, atmospheric studies—views of California, taken with a diffused lens, on paper imported from England and colored with dyes, and photogravures in miniature. All of these are on display in the art exhibit at the Grafton Hotel arranged in connection with the biennial convention of the pen women, also included is a memorial library plaque in solid brass, another example of her work. This she finished only last month, working 34 hours out of 36 in order to mould the metal while it was hot. It is 9x11 inches and weighs 6 pounds. Miss Wheeler's purpose in showing all of these types of work is to illustrate the different ways in which an artist may use her talent.

Miss Wheeler has designed many fine bookplates among them that for the national Y. W. C. A., Kappa Kappa Gamma national sorority, of which she is a member, and that of the late Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of State. This is a steel engraving showing the marble bench beneath the pergola in the formal garden of the Kellogg home in St. Paul.

The 5,000 books of the Kellogg library all bear the plate. Mrs. Kellogg is giving a section of this collection to the Public Library in Rochester, Minn., where he started reading law in the office of the county attorney. He made his home at that time with Miss Wheeler's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Spaulding Clark, jr.

She also designed the bookplate for the late Mildred Aldrich, author of "The Hilltop on the Marne," copying a picture of "the little house on the Marne," described in the book. The author's library is now a section of the American Library in Paris, all bookplated.

Miss Wheeler is one of 55 American designers whose work is recognized by the Bookplate Association International, which has presented the work of designers of 18 countries. She is listed in "Who's Who," and a file of her bookplates has been placed in the Library of Congress by the American Society of Book Plate Collectors and Designers, with headquarters here.

Sigma Kappas To Install Unit

On Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, immediately following the annual luncheon of the Washington Panhellenic Association, Sigma Kappa International Sorority will establish a new chapter at the University of Maryland. Plans for activities incident to the formal installation of the group, to be known as Beta Zeta Chapter, are under the general direction of Mrs. Harlow C. McCord, president of the Washington Alumnae Association.

Sigma Kappa is among the oldest Greek letter societies, having been founded in 1874 at Colby College, Waterville, Me.

The Maryland unit, which will be the forty-fourth college chapter of the fraternity, was organized on September 16, 1936, by Jane Beals, Margaret Menke and Agnes Baldwin. At that time there were five national sororities on the Maryland campus—Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Xi Delta, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Delta and Kappa Kappa Gamma. Shortly thereafter another local society was organized which Saturday night is attaining national status by its affiliation with Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. It is expected that within a short time a chapter of Gamma Phi Beta, national sorority, will also be installed.

Tomorrow night the chapter's 23 college members and 2 alumnae will be formally pledged to Sigma Kappa in ceremonies to be conducted at the Carlton Hotel by Mrs. Richard M. Wick, grand counselor, of Allentown, Pa., known to many Washingtonians as the former Alice Hersey, daughter of the late Gen. and Mrs. Mark L. Hersey. Mrs. Wick will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth C. Spencer, regional president, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Alma Barker and Mrs. Robert Van Sickler. Miss Lee McNeill is chairman of the committee in charge of the pledge service.

How America got the news of Norway's Benedict Arnolds

Leland Stowe

ON MONDAY EVENING, April 8, Leland Stowe —white-haired, 40-year-old correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and its syndicate —sat in Oslo's Grand Hotel talking idly about Europe's dormant war.

No guns rumbled nearer than the Sylt. The good burghers of Oslo were safe in their beds. The hot breath of battle seemed far away.

▶ At half past midnight the city heard its first warlike sound in a hundred years. A noise like a thousand angry motorists stalled in a traffic jam—the raucous bellowing of air-raid sirens.

At 7:45 the next morning, Stowe and his colleagues, Edmund Stevens of the Christian Science Monitor and Warren Irvin of N.B.C., watched Nazi bombers roar over the trim Norwegian housetops. All morning the German Junkers came, not in sky-darkening swarms, but by twos and threes. No bombs fell. Scarcely a shot was fired.

In the streets, at public buildings, men acted like curious children. There was little terror. Only bewilderment.

▶ By 2 in the afternoon, the incredible had happened. The tramp of Nazi boots, the rumble of Nazi lorries, were echoing through Oslo streets. The conquerors, marching by threes, made the thin gray column look longer. Unarmed city police held back a crowd that numbered thousands of brawny young Norsemen of fighting age. People gaped like yokels on the Fourth of July at the spectacle of 1500 Germans taking possession of a city of 253,000—a handful of invaders so sure of easy conquest that they had a brass band!

Was this an instance of awesome Nazi might? ...of a little neutral's pathetic unpreparedness? To the keen mind of Leland Stowe, sharpened by experience with European intrigue, familiar with Oslo's defenses, the thing didn't make sense.

...the brass hats arrive

...into Oslo led by a band

▶ Stowe got busy and, little by little, began to pick up the pieces of the most fantastic story of the war. A story of a small but potent Norwegian war fleet in the harbor whose crews had been deliberately ordered ashore. A story of fortresses and anti-aircraft batteries that didn't fire, or fired startlingly wide of the mark. A story of mines whose electrical control system had been disconnected. A story of a free people infested through and through with spies, who could never have crept into key positions without the aid of traitors.

▶ Chauffeured by a fair compatriot with a smiling comeback to German gallantries, Stowe escaped to Stockholm and gave the world the news of Norway's gigantic inside job. Another feather in the cap of the reporter who won the Pulitzer Prize in 1930... the man who wrote the most eloquent dispatch of the Finnish "incident"... the 40-year-old man who was told by a New York newspaper last fall that he was "too old to cover a war."

Take a poll among newsmen for ace correspondent of World War II, and Leland Stowe's name would probably top the list. But there would be runners-up...

▶ Lochner of AP and Oechsner of UP, covering Berlin. Walter Kerr of the N. Y. Herald Tribune. Columbia Broadcasting's Ed Murrow in London. Otto Tolischus of the N. Y. Times. Frank R. Kent, Jr., of the Baltimore Sun. Young Bill White of Emporia, Kansas, doing the old man proud in Germany and Finland.

Yet no one man, not Richard Harding Davis himself, could cover the present war. For total war means total reporting—and total reporting means manpower. All told, it takes 10,000 men to report the holocaust in Europe. For war rages today, not on a single front, but on thousands.

The economic front is everywhere. All newsmen help to cover it. The correspondent in the dugout, noticing how the men are fed and clothed. The man in the capital gathering facts on production. The traveling thinkman with eye peeled for slowdown or sabotage. The editors or bureau heads who fit the jigsaw puzzle together.

Then there is the diplomatic front, a labyrinth where only the most experienced can find their way around. And the propaganda front ...reactions of the people... how they take the new ration order... how much of the ideological spray sinks in—all this takes the shrewdest kind of reporting.

Just the same, we all love red, so the newsmen go through hell and high water to give it to us. And a whole long year ago, TIME, the Weekly Newsmagazine, began to paint the background that would give those flaming stories meaning—in Background for War, TIME's famous panorama of Europe on the brink.

▶ In every new issue, TIME changes and illuminates the shadows behind the crackling, red-hot stories of the week. Stories from TIME's own big and growing foreign staff, from the Associated Press, of which TIME is a member, from the ace correspondents (with enthusiastic credit).

TIME gives the total coverage that total war demands. TIME unravels the economic and diplomatic snarl. TIME reconciles conflicting stories—weighs one against the other, knows the sources and the mental slant of each reporter, comes up with the composite, clarified answer.

TIME helps beat the censor, tells whether a backhand story like "The government denies that there is any truth in the rumor..." really means "The government denies it, but it's a fact."

▶ No man knows where the next explosion will be and neither does TIME... But TIME knows and tells where the TNT is stored.

It's pretty important to know where we are in this war. TIME shows you both the woods and the trees.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime as you live the story of your life.

Trade Board Elects Staff, Meets Young

1,000 Attend Session, Hear First Address Of Commissioner

One thousand members of the Washington Board of Trade met the new District Commissioner, John Russell Young, and elected new directors at the annual meeting last night in the Mayflower Hotel.

The new board members are John J. Halsey, vice president and general manager of Palais Royal, Inc.; C. Hayward Marshall, building contractor; Alfred G. Neal, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank.

Herman F. Carl, vice president of Call Carl, Inc., and James B. Edmunds, general agent of the Chesapeake & Ohio Lines, who have served previously as directors, were given a second term.

Members Reelected

Reelected to a second consecutive term on the board were Lawrence E. Williams, its president and vice president, of Fries, Beall & Sharp Co., Inc.; Edgar Morris, president of the Edgar Morris Sales Co.; Granville Gude, president of Gude Bros. Co., and W. W. Everett, vice president and general manager of Woodward & Lothrop, Inc.

The new members, chosen for a term of three years, will meet with the other 20 directors at 11 a. m. Saturday to elect new officers.

The meeting between the membership and Young was the first for both. He was making his first appearance before a board gathering as a member of the organization, and the board was seeing the former White House correspondent for the first time as District Commissioner.

Commissioner Young in six words revealed that he had determined upon a policy of office. He said he would "keep my mouth shut and work."

Makes First Address

Making his first public address since taking oath of office, the Commissioner previously had asked his audience if it wanted to know if he had formulated any policies. He answered his own question:

"I am not campaigning. I have already been elected. I'm for the people. You can't go wrong on that."

Commenting on his initial official introduction to the organization, the commissioner said:

"I might say I am as proud of the fact that I am a new member of the board as I am of being commissioner."

"It is comforting to know," he added, "that I can call on this organization for advice and help. I feel that I shall be coming to you often."

Young recalled his first visit as a Commissioner to the House District Committee and said "the next day, the city's deficit was increased by $800,000." "That's pretty good for one week's work."

Williams, who presided, introduced members whose names will be inscribed on a memorial plaque as a tribute to their leadership in the organization's drive for new members. They were Garrett Pendleton, who brought in 51 new members; Christian Heurich, jr., 34 members; Thomas J. Groom, 30; Clarence W. Gosnell, 27; James A. Cassidy, 26, and W. Russell Lamar, 26.

Visions New Program

Williams, in reviewing board activities for the year, predicted that a legislative program, including reorganization of the city government and "satisfactory to the majority of District residents," would be adopted by Congress within six weeks.

Morris, chairman of the executive committee of the Greater National Capital Committee, in referring to Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey's "boom town" description of Washington, retorted:

"We all know that Washington has made progress, but what we are interested in is keeping Washington from getting into a depression."

Hasley, chairman of the committee's compaign for $62,500 to meet operating expenses for another year, pointed a plea for support by citing that the businessmen of the city pay $1 for every $1,000 worth of tourist business brought in by the organization.

Sees Drive a Success

He reported that $47,267.25 has been collected and predicted that the drive would "go over the top."

The speaker of the evening was elaborately introduced as "Dr. Merriweil Lippman Crock, economist, analyst and strategist, who is reported to have accompanied Undersecretary Welles to Europe." His address, Williams emphasized, would be "strictly off the record."

After a humorous and satirical dissertion on foreign, domestic and municipal affairs, illustrated with his own sketches, "Dr. Crock" was introduced to the audience as Representative John M. Vorys, scholarly Ohio Republican, who closed with an on the record "postscript:"

"There is a certain lady in our midst who doesn't believe this is a very good place in which to live. I, and 435 of my colleagues in the House, believe this is a great place in which to live and we try to get back here every two years."

Suspects Re-enact Sirkis Killing

Detectives yesterday witnessed the reenactment of the fatal shooting February 26 of Herman Sirkis, liquor store proprietor, and the performance forged the final link of evidence against two colored men, police said, confessed the killing.

The suspects were taken to the Sirkis store, 4824 Deane avenue northeast, and repeated their actions on the night of the holdup slaying before homicide squad detectives, authorities said.

The youngest of the two men, who is 23, showed detectives how he fired one shot over his shoulder at Sirkis after the latter opened fire on them, police reported

D. C. Appeals Sweeney Tax Case Decision

3 Errors Made In Court of Appeals Ruling, Seal Says

The District government yesterday appealed to the Supreme Court to review the Sweeney decision handed down by the District Court of Appeals, which held a Federal employe not domiciled in the District is not subject to the intangible personal property tax.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, who drew the petition, said the lower tribunal had made three errors in its decision. The decision may have far-reaching effect on the District's income tax which is based on a person being domiciled here.

James J. Sweeney, an attorney in the Justice Department, who maintains a residence here, but claims a legal residence in Boston, fought the intangible tax from the District assessor's office to the District Court of Appeals and was victorious.

The District petition told the Supreme Court that the lower tribunal had erred in the following particulars:

In holding that Sweeney was not domiciled in the District for purposes of taxation.

In holding that there is a presumption that an individual who comes to the District retains his domicile for all purposes in that State from which he comes.

In holding that the domicile of an individual employed by the Government is to be determined upon different principles than one in private employment.

3 Stables Burn

Three stables on the historic Emery estate, 5759 Georgia avenue northwest, were burned in a two-alarm fire last night.

The estate was at one-time the country home of Matthew Gault Emery, last of Washington's mayors. the fight for Fort Stevens

Medical Society Told of Odd, Painless Surgery

Painless Fourteenth century treatments of a French surgical pioneer who dosed patients with alcoholic "wound drinks" and prescribed soothing music instead of medicine was described last night at a meeting of the Medical Society of the District.

Dr. John H. Lyons, president of the society, told the foibles of Henri de Mondeville, in a talk on "Progress and Personalities in Early French Surgery" at 1718 M street northwest.

Dr. Lyons told of one of the ethical credos of Mondeville, who devised an ingenious means of removing barbed arrows from a wound with a "small derrick-like tood." It was: "Never dine with a patient who is in your debt . . . or he will deduct his hospitality from your fee."

Real Robbers Confess, Save 2 From Trial

Confession of the actual robbers saved John K. Stewart, 28, 1021 Tenth street northeast, and Leon M. Smith, 20, 1010 Seventh street northeast, on the morning they were to go on trial in the District Court, on holdup charges.

Smith and Stewart were arrested for an argument with a bus driver two hours after a filling station at 70 H street northeast was held up at 12:35 a. m., March 24. Before daylight James Dallas Payne, Silver Spring, manager of the station, identified Smith as the man who held a gun while Stewart took his purse.

Payne and another witness repeated the identification a few days later. The colored men could not account for themselves at the time of the holdup and were held in jail under $5,000 bond each until Tuesday. Shortly before Smith and Stewart were to face a jury, in peril of a sentence of 2 to 15 years in prison, Assistant District Attorney John Jackson was informed that two other colored men had confessed the crime.

Women Hear Plea for Public Defender

Kefauver Defends His Bill Before University Association

A District public defender to insure adequate legal counsel for indigent persons was urged last night by two House Judiciary Commmitteemen and representatives of two bar associations at a dinner of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women.

Representative Kefauver ((Democrat), of Tennessee, author of a bill to establish the defender system here declared a paid public advocate necessary here because the system of assigning attorneys has "broken down." He spoke at the association headquarters, 1634 I street northwest.

Lack Interest, He Says

Lawyers appointed by judges to defend a client without remuneration are not sufficiently interested in the case, nor able to spend sufficient time on it to prepare an adequate defense, he asserted.

The chances of a judge's selection of a lawyer competent for defense of the indigent person is slimmer here because of the wide District legal jurisdiction and the specialization of lawyers in fields of law other than criminal, the Representative declared.

Comparisons Drawn

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, also criticized the present system of selecting "at random" lawyers to represent impoverished defendants. He pointed to the successful working of public defender systems in other cities.

Also favoring the proposed public defense system were Frederick A. Ballard, chairman of a District Bar Association committee on the subject, and Miss Catherine Vaux, legislative chairman of the Women's Bar Association of the District.

Takoma Park Marks Golden Jubilee Of Charter With Exercises at Fire Hall

Fiftieth anniversary observance of Takoma Park becoming a town, held in the Takoma Park fire house last night, was occasion for reminiscences and yarn swapping by the old timers. Looking over an old photograph are (left to right) Frederick L. Lewton, former mayor; John Kinnear, first town clerk and later mayor; John R. Adams, present mayor, and Elbert E. Blodgett, first chief of police

Residents of Takoma Park last night marked the fiftieth anniversary of the granting of the town charter with exercises at the fire hall, Carroll and Denwood avenues.

Feature speaker was John Kinnear, 82, who was the town's first clerk and treasurer and who served as mayor from 1902 to 1906. He came to Takoma Park in 1888 and is the lone surviving member of th committee of three which obtained the charter. He recalled experiences of the town's early days, nd said that during his four-year regime, there had been only two violations, both by nonresidents who had too much "buckjuice."

Mayor John R. Adams, a resident of Takoma Park for the past 48 years, described the town's "horse and buggy" days. He said that through the years Takoma Park had outstanding men serving as town officials. He added that he felt it would take several years for the town to overcome the effect of the Hatch Act, which bars Government employes from holding office.

Other guests of honor were former Mayor Frederick L. Lewton; Elbert Blodgett, 88, first police chief; L. E. Grabill, 88, former town councilman. A telegram was sent by former Mayor J. L. Wilmeth, now living in Philadelphia.

Frederick L. Pratt delivered a monologue on the town's first administration, and sang comic songs, accompanied by his wife, Ruth. Solos were sung by Eva Owens, and a series of songs presented by the Glee Club of the Review and Herald Publishing Co. of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Invocation was offered by the Rev. C. F. Longacre.

Committee in charge of the celebration included William A. Hooker, Myllard Taft, E. Brook Fetty and Leo Hubbard.

Nonresident School Fees Face Defeat

Senate Removal Seen for House Ban; Expenses Wouldn't Be Cut, Ballou Says

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Elimination from the District supply bill of the House ban on further free admissions of nonresidents in Washington public schools was indicated by the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations yesterday because of the opposition in the Senate to the proposal.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, was asked by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, whether he would be willing to accept a $250,000 reduction in school appropriations if the nonresidents failed to enroll because of tuition.

He replied that the overhead expense of the school system would continue regardless of the removal of the nonresident pupils. The subcommittee instructed the superintendent to produce records of all previous acts of Congress, chiefly in appropriations laws, in which free admission has been extended to nonresident pupils.

The House inserted the prohibition after Dr. Ballou testified that education of nonresident pupils cost the District $250,000 annually.

Driving Course Described

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, indicated funds will be placed in the supply bill for extension of the student-driver training course to two senior high school and a colored vocational school after listening to spokesmen of the American Automobile Association.

Washington I. Cleveland and Mrs. George Thorpe, speaking for the A. A. A., described the success of the student-training course at the Abbott Vocational School.

Overton said he considered the training to have a public safety value.

The subcommittee chairman also said he was sympathetic with the suggestion of Cleveland and Mrs. Thorpe that the commissioners be directed to make a study of off-street parking facilities and report to Congress by January 1, 1941.

Off-Street Parking Discussed

The study, which was said to have the approval of Engineer Commissioner McCoach, will seek to determine the types and extent of municipal parking areas off the streets. The Commissioners would be directed to submit estimates as to the cost and methods of financing the projects.

For the extension of the driver-training course the A. A. A. representatives recommended the employment of three additional instructers at $2,000 each and an additional $400 for expenses.

The annual scrap over whether the Wilson Teachers College or the Abbott Vocational School should be constructed at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest was revived as the subcommittee listened to a variety of requests for school improvements.

George M. Gooch, vice president of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association, and Dr. James E. Higbie, president of the college, submitted a map to show that the requested site would be right in the center of the college population whereas it would be on the outskirts of the area feeding the vocational school.

Upshur Site Upheld

The Board of Education and the Commissioners have indorsed the vocational school for the Upshur street site, as now provided in the House bill. The Budget Bureau specified a site in Brentwood Park.

Other civic spokesmen heard by the subcommittee were Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, First Ward Citizens Association, who asked replacement of the Grant, Weightman, and Corcoran schools; Mrs. S. J. McCathran, of the P.-T. A Congress, who asked for hot water facilities in all public schools and for assistant principals and clerks in the high schools; Harry S. Witesell, of the District Vocational Association, who asked that a new Abbott school be built, regardless of the site; Henry Austin, of Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, who asked that a site be purchased for a school in Bradbury Heights; Miss Selma Borchart, of the Teachers' Union, and Mrs. C. H. Collingwood, of P.-T. A., in behalf of more teachers and clerks.

The subcommittee will resume hearing civic spokesmen at 10 o'clock this morning.

St. John, Beaten On Boat, Dies In Hospital

Robert Lee St. John, 45-year-old former sign painter, who lived alone on a boat near the Benning Power Plant, died at Casualty Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull, the victim of an unidentified assailant.

Before his death at 2:15 p. m., detectives arrested two white men as suspects, bringing to five the total number under investigation in connection with the crime. Two of the suspects are colored. The three white men are rivermen.

Three men were arrested Tuesday afternoon a short time after St. John, battered and unconscious, was found leaning against the companionway of his 28-foot power vessel, The Tillicum.

War Games Shut to Foreign Military Men

The responsibility of high schools to meet the needs of the "slow learners," who in an earlier day would have dropped out to find work, was stressed by Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, at the institute of Washington public school teachers yesterday.

Most of the 2,000 teachers gathered in McKinley High School Auditorium yesterday to hear Dr. Graham tell how the Pittsburgh school system is meeting the youth problem. His adddress will be repeated this afternoon for the colored teachers' institute in Armstrong Hich School Auditorium.

Dr. Graham told of the classes organized for "'slow learners" to proceed at the pace of which the are capable.

"These boys and girls can't go out and get jobs in industry. The jobs aren't there. The law and social pressure says they must stay in school. Yet they can't go the pace of the students with an academic type of mind," he pointed out.

"But one of the worst experiences young people can have is to go through a serious of failures. So the problem is to arrange courses in which even the slowest learners, academically, may have an opportunity to succeed in the type of thing they can do," he said.

The Pittsburgh school system, he said, attempted to cultivate in these students a wholesome attitude toward work, good habits of work, literacy, good citizenship and character.

"Literacy is far more than the ability to read, write and spell. It should be the ability to read and interpret and apply knowledge about the current work of the world," Dr. Graham added.

Groups Fight Real Estate Tax Increase

Arkansas Ave. And Trinidad Associations Oppose Raise

Two citizens associations last night vigorously expressed opposition to any increase in the District real estate tax.

Discussions on the subject occupied an important part of the programs conducted by the Trinidad and the Arkansas Avenue Community Associations. The latter group took steps to send a delegation to House and Senate District Committees to voice the association's protest against a boost in taxes at this time.

Business transacted by these and other citizens organizations follows:

Arkansas Avenue

The Arkansas Avenue Community Association last night voiced vigorous opposition to any increase in the District's real estate tax.

The group emphasized its disapproval of higher taxes by authorizing a special committee to appear before House and Senate District committees. Appointed to the committee were Walter M. Podrog, Claude C. Moberly and Mrs. Isabel Thompson.

The 78 members of the organization who attended last night's meeting heard Herbert E. Phelps, vice president of the Brookings Institution. Phelps spoke on the civic obligation of the individual to bring to the attention of District and Congressional officials the needs of their communities through citizen's associations.

The association moved to petition the House District Committee to restore the Abbott Vocational School to the 10-acre site formerly occupied by the Brentwood school. The meeting was held at the Telford Buffetaria, 4728 Fourteenth street northwest.

Trinidad

The Trinidad Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution opposing any increase in the District real estate tax and levying of any new taxes during this session of Congress.

Held in the Wheatley School, Montello avenue and Neal street northeast, the meeting was attended by 48 members who unanimously supported a resolution urging the purchase of an ambulance for the Metropolitan Police Department. This followed the disclosure that the only one available to Northeast residents was the Casualty Hospital ambulance.

Two other resolutions, adopted by the association, opposed any change in District child labor laws, and appealed to District officials to investigate the fire hazard constituted by the Sixteenth street section between Oates and Meigs streets northeast.

North Washington

Emily Tilton was named chairman of a nominating committee to select a slate of officers for the North Washington Neighborhood Council at a meeting last night in the Petworth Libarary.

Rose Lewis and Mrs. H. A. Phelps will serve on Miss Tilton's committee. The election will be conducted at the next meeting May 22. New officers assume duties June 1.

Moshavel Testimonial

The District Disabled Firemen's Association will give a testimonial dinner at 8 tonight in Weber's, Fourth and H street northeast, for Andrew J. Moshavel, former fire department captain who has been retired for 32 years. Speakers will be P. W. Nicholson, retired deputy chief engineer.

Nats Finally Win as Bosox Bow to Rally, 9-6

Lefty Grove Chased As D. C. Team Wakes Up; Masterson Shines In Relief Assignment

By Shirley Povich
A Staff Correspondent

Boston, April 24.—The awakening of the Nats was a rude jolt to the Boston Red Sox today. You'd have been proud of your Washington athletes this afternoon. They had power, determination, tenacity and all the so-called finer attributes. They wrenched a 9-6 victory from the Red Sox in a late inning display and broke a four-game losing streak.

Washington's first victory of the young season was delivered largely by young Walter Masterson, who came out of the bull-pen in the seventh inning and reduced Boston's power to a whisper with an amazing three-inning job.

Until Masterson appeared on the scene, the Red Sox had been making free with the pitching of Joe Haynes and Sid Hudson in the fifth and sixth innings. They scored three runs in each session and were splattering base hits all over the lot and in fact, out of it.

Masterson Inspired

The Nats had displayed their first show of power of the season, however, by scoring five runs off Lefty Grove in the fifth and sixth innings, and Boston's lead was reduced to 6-5 when Masterson appeared on what seemed to be a hopeless scene.

And then the bespectacled young rookie from the Philadelphia sandlots started to pitch inspired ball. He finished that way, too, and shut out the Red Sox in the seventh, eighth and ninth. Moreover, he struck out four of them with a fast ball that crackled, and the only hit he allowed was a cheap Texas league single by Roger Cramer.

As if in appreciation of Masterson's valiant stand, the Nats came up with a four-run rally in the eighth inning to wipe out the Red Sox lead and win the ball game. Lefty Grove departed the scene at the end of the sixth and escaped being charged with the defeat when he turned over a 6-5 lead to Rookie Herb Hash, late of Minneapolis.

Hash Walks Walker

Hash's first act was to walk Gerry Walker, and then Cecil Travis, who had already reached Grove for two hits, belted a single to left that moved Walker to third with the tying run. Jimmy Bloodworth moved Walker home with a deep fly to Finney, but the Nats weren't through. Jimmy Pofahl singled to left, and Hash was withdrawn in favor of relief ace Johnny Heving.

In this crisis, Bucky Harris sent Jake Early to pinch hit for Al Evans, and Early's contribution was a ground ball that moved Travis and Pofhal to third and second, respectively, for the second out. Whereupon Heving dug his own pitfall by walking Masterson, the league's worst hitter, to fill the bases.

George Case's contribution was a hard smash that Tabor muffed. Tabor was harshly charged with an error on the ball, and Travis crossed the plate with the run that put the Nats ahead, 7-6. Then along came Buddy Lewis to make his first important hit of the season. He lashed into a slow ball for a single to center and two more runs crossed the plate.

Joe Jacobs, Galento's Manager, Dies at 44

Colorful Boxing Figure Stricken By Heart Attack

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—Joe Jacobs, manager of heavyweight Tony Galento, and a legendary figure in boxing circles for many years, died tonight from a heart attack. He would have been 44 May 7.

Death occurred in a doctor's office where Jacobs, laughing disdainfully at a "slight pain," had gone to seek relief. He was accompanied by Harry Mendel, promoter of six-day bicycle races around the country and Jacob's close friend for many years.

Mendel said Jacobs had felt badly last night, but did not regard his illness as serious and went about his business as usual today, escorting motion-picture photographers to New Jersey to make shots of Galento.

Jacobs, known familiarly among the fight mob as "Yussel," managed Max Schmeling of Germany to the world's heavyweight championship. In 1930 Jack Sharkey struck Schmeling low in the fourth round and Jacobs rushed into the ring, yelling "foul" so vociferously the referee awarded the German the title.

Product of "Hell's Kitchen"

Two years later Sharkey regained the title with a 15-round decision and Jacobs achieved some sort of immortality by entering the ring and bellowing "we wuz robbed."

Jacobs also coined the crack, "I should of stood in bed," when one cold morning he ventured out of a Chicago hotel with Promoter Mike Jacobs, bent on seeing a baseball game.

He broke into boxing early when Willie and Dave Astey, friends of his, asked Joe to carry their boxing equipment into the old Madison Square Garden. When time came to fight, Jacobs was pressed into service as a second—and that started a career that was certainly as colorful as any in the fistic world.

Among the fighters he managed were Benny Zalga, Featherweight Champion Andre Routis, Schmeling, Galento and Mike McTigue, light heavyweight champion of the 1920's.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, April 24.—The strain of defeat happily broken by their late inning outburst against the Red Sox this afternoon, the Nats tonight entrained for Washington and the opening of a long home stand tomorrow.

Manager Bucky Harris has Southpaw Joe Krakauskas groomed for duty tomorrow when the Nats take the field for the start of a two-game series with the Athletics at Griffith Stadium. Krakauskas will be making his first start of the season.

Advices from Philadelphia are that Connie Mack will send George Caster to the mound. Caster, like Krakauskas, will be making his maiden appearance of the season. In previous years, his knuckle ball has been a prime source of annoyance to the Nats.

Indians Beat Browns, 6-4; Take Series

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 24.—Cleveland took advantage of every scoring opportunity—the Brown's didn't—and swept the two-game series with a 6-to-4 victory today.

Aiding no little in the Cleveland cause was Ray Mack's eighth inning home run with Rollie Hemsley on base. Another run already had been scored that inning, Jeff Heath coming home from third as Hemsley forced out Ken Keltner at second.

If Alan Strange and Don Heffner had not collided in Cleveland's big eighth, thus missing a chance for a double play, and assuming the remainder of the game went as it did, St. Louis would have won. If the double play had been completed, Cleveland would have been retired that inning without a run.

Scores Over Zacorel By Half Length; 9,000 Fans on Hand

By Walter Haight

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24.—Getting the best of the racing luck but making the most of the opportunity offered, the combination of Becomly, a daughter of Swashbuckler, and Jockey Mannie Berg, a Baltimore boy, won the eagerly sought Aberdeen Stakes here today. Holding on gamely in front of a fast-closing Zacorel, from the Christiana Stable, Becomly scored by a half length margin in one of the biggest upsets in the long history of the $2,500 added dash for 2-year-olds.

Becomly had only a scattered backing in the crowd of 9,000 and produced an $83.80 mutuel while running the 4½ furlongs in 0:54 3-5, good time for the route over a track that was not entirely dry.

Third in the field of ten was Double Call, the King Farm's colt which set a world's record for a half-mile at Tropical Park last winter. E. K. Bryson's Nannykins, whose stablemate, Imprudent, won the Aberdeen last year, was a faltering fourth.

Experienced observers agreed that Zacorel probably was the best of the fleet group. This colt, making his second start on any race track, was crowded into the rail soon after the start and Jockey Sonny Workman was forced to weave his way to the outside for racing room. After this trouble, Zacorel closed with a mighty rush.

Becomly had clear sailing all the way. She broke on top and was hustled along when outrun by the

Mid-Atlantic P. G. A. Championship Is Off

Bobby Cruickshank Leads Virginia Pros In 'Strike' Over Harper's Eligibility; Barnett's Attempts to Revive Tourney Fail

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A threatened boycott by Bobby Cruickshank and his fellow P. G. A. members in Virginia over the eligibility of Chandler Harper led to the cancellation of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Tournament at Old Point Comfort, Va., tomorrow and Saturday.

Cruickshank notified tournament officials that if Harper did not play the Virginia pros would not compete. Sectional President Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, was on the scene of the event and immediately notified sponsor Sidney Banks, who is in New York. The latter asked if a posponement could not be effected, and when Beach said the tournament must be held on the scheduled dates or not at all, Banks withdrew his $1,000 offer.

Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase professional and vice president of the pro association from this city, tried in vain late yesterday to have the 72-hole medal play event go through as scheduled. He put through a half-dozen long distance calls to Beach, Banks, Harper, Cruickshank, and National P. G. A. President Tom Walsh, in Chicago but it was too late. Barnett severely criticized Beach for letting the tournament fall through on his own responsibility, instead of a vote from the executive committee.

Wasn't Eligible Anyway

The belief here was that Cruickshank and the other ring-leaders of the Old Dominion pros, who pulled a carbon copy of the "Pomonok Indicent" that nearly wrecked the National P. G. A. championship last year in New York, were misinformed on the Harper case as the Portsmouth pro is not qualified, under any circumstances, to be a member of the organization, and eligible for the tournament.

Although he was technically eligible on January 1 to file application for membership in the pro body, as he had been a professional for five years at the time, Harper did not apply to Secretary John Flattery until April 17. At a meeting here Monday at Beaver Dam, the pros voted Harper into the organization, but it takes at least 30 days for his name to clear the proper channels, and he had been told that weeks ago.

Harper Must Wait

The board of control of the national body must notify each section of such application, and then conduct a further investigation and examination, according to the P. G. A. by-laws. However, President Walsh indicated last night that Harper would have to wait five more years, as he had never served as a club professional. For the same reason, Lawson Little, although a pro four years, will have to wait four or five more as he was just recently signed to a club.

Harper was quoted in a Virginia newspaper yesterday as saying "the whole thing is a matter of personal discrimination, or maybe they're just afraid I'll win all the money," when told he has been passed by the local body but would not be eligible for the tournament.

In another round robin series of phone calls last night, Walsh called Cruikshank for an explanation of the affair and explained how Harper was not eligible for membership. Chruikshank refused to change his views, however, and would not cooperate with his fellow pros in a last attempt to salvage the tournament. Wharton Pritchard, manager of the Chamberlin Club, announced the club was willing to stage the tourney at a later date, but after the ill feeling the Harper incident caused it is not likely that the boys will get together.

Walker's Hit Helps Dodgers Beat Bees, 8-6

Pinch Single Scores Two Runs; Cullenbine Clouts 3-Run Homer

By International News Service

New York, April 24.—Fred Walker's pinch-hit single today scored two runs in the eighth inning to give the Brooklyn Dodgers an 8-to-6 victory over the Boston Bees and an unblemished season's record of four straight wins.

Swift, third Bee pitcher after Joe Sullivan and Dick Coffman, walked two men in the eighth, and Dolf Camilli's single registered the tying run. Another pass was followed by Walker's blow.

Roy Cullenbine accounted for three of four Dodger runs in the first inning, when he clouted a homer. The Bees got a run in the first, two in the second and again in the third. The Dodgers tied the score in

Nats Can Thank Arch for Jinx Removal

Arch McDonald, who follows the doings of the Nats from his WJSV microphone, turned out yesterday in his 10-gallon hat and Sunday-go-to-meeting suit in an effort to break the Washington club's jinx—and apparently he did it. POVICH

CRONIN—It's nice to be out in front of the Yankees. If we can get in a few wins before Joe DiMaggio gets back into the Yankee line-up, it will be so much gravy. This is when we've got to make hay. The Yanks aren't the Yanks without Di-Mag. And victories count as much now as they do in September.

"Lou Finney is a changed man. I don't know if I want Dominic DiMaggio back in our line-up. Finney was a great buy from the Athletics at the $7,500 waiver price. He's down on the end of the bat now—not the choke hitter he was with the A's. And the strange part of it is that he's meeting the ball more often and his longer swing gives him more power. Nice guy to have around.

"I'm wondering, though, about Tabor at third base. Half-tempted to give up on him and let Marvin Owen play the bag. Tabor can't carry Owen's glove. Strong arm but not a good one. Who knows when Tabor is going to throw the ball away in a tough spot. Tabor will outhit Owen, but maybe we have enough power to carry Owen anyway. I'll wait awhile, but if Tabor can't give us some important hits, he's outa there.

"This is wonderful, all this power on our club. Now I know how Joe McCarthy feels. We'll outhit those Yankees. Right now, I'm the worst hitter on this club. Timing's off. Maybe I better get some morning practice. If I don't start hitting soon, I'm dropping myself to sixth and letting Bobby Doerr hit fifth.

"The Yankees can have Joe Gordon. I'll take Doerr. Better hitter. And he can field with Gordon, too. Doerr can't make all those acrobatic plays, but he's steadier than Gordon. Doerr plays a tune on this leftfield fence. Great guy to work with on double plays, too. I knew he was a ball player the first time I laid eyes on him. He can do so many things better than I can.

"Wouldn't swap Ted Williams for Charley Keller. Don't know if I'd swap him for DiMaggio. Williams is wonderful, that's all. Any time they get him out it's an accident. Wish I had his leverage. He's going to break up many a game for us. If I start hitting we'll be dynamite, Williams, Foxx and myself. Jeez, I hope our pitching is half decent. Be a shame to spoil this kind of a ball club with lousy pitching. If we only have the luck with our young pitchers that we've had in picking up other rookies."

HARRIS: "Look at Cronin, the lucky stiff. All that power. Pretty soft for him, while I've got to worry along with a lot of slap hitters. It wouldn't be so bad, if they'd hit, though. Would give us a chance to use some of our speed on the bases. But speed doesn't count if you can't get on base. Why do I always come up with these punchless clubs?

"Buddy Lewis doesn't look as if he's ever going to get a hit, and he's supposed to be our power. He's twisting around up at the plate like a pretzel. Way off form. He'd better forget that crouch. I'll have to take him aside. If Lewis doesn't hit, we're sunk. It's going to be an awful summer for me unless he snaps out of it.

"Walker's no bargain yet, either. At least Taft Wright is getting his hits for the White Sox. Why do I have this kind of luck? The minute he joins the Washington club, a good hitter stops hitting. Travis is the only guy who's taking a good cut for me. He could hit in the dark. Speed on the bases, humph. What good is it if we can't get on base.

"And Leonard gets beat yesterday. If we can't win with him, we're in a heluva way. We've got to have ten runs to win a ball game, and where am I gonna get ten runs? Some day, I'd like to get off to a nice nine-run lead and then sit back and take it easy like some of these other managers. It must be wonderful to give guys like Foxx and Williams and DiMaggio the hit sign and then watch 'em hit.

"Wasdell hasn't made any mistakes at first base yet, but he hasn't hit yet, either. Pofahl is a nice boy, but we can use some hits from him, too. Bloodworth ought to start producing, too. I wish I had his power when I was playing ball, they'd never get me out.

"Oh, well. This can't go on. We're gonna win a game pretty soon. Somebody besides Leonard will give us a nice pitched game and will I be surprised? On that day we'll probably score enough runs to win a couple of games. It'll be just my luck. We've lost four in a row and the funny part is we haven't made a single mistake. We haven't actually muffed a game. We've got to get some runs, though. What I couldn't do with Cronin's power . . ."

New York, April 24.—Notes so hot:

Tony Galento must be saving his breath for the night of his fight against Max Baer. For all he would say in reply to Baer's opening blast against him was, "Why should anybody kid themself? This fight's only a warm-up for me, to get my aim back. Didn't Mike Jacobs say that the winner of Galento-Nova would meet the winner of Louis-Pastor? So this is just a workout, see? And as for that bum, Baer, if he's so anxious to fight me, what happened to the bum a year ago when he was offered $50,000 to fight me in Philadelphia, and turned it down to get licked by Lou Nova. I'll chase the tramp right outta the ring."

Catcher Al Todd First Major Leaguer Fined

New York, April 24 (AP).—The first player fine of the major league season was pinned today on Catcher Al Todd, of the Chicago Cubs, by Ford Frick, National League president.

Frick put a $75 "bite" on Todd for the Cub catcher's row with Umpire Tom Dunn in the ninth inning of yesterday's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The fuss started when Dunn called Debs Garms safe at the plate in the ninth inning with the winning run for the Bucs.

Yankees Blast Athletic Hurlers for Four Homers, 9-4 Victory

Rolfe's Pair Scores Three N. Y. Runs

Gordon, Henrich Also Connect as 4 of A's Pitchers See Action; Ruffing Is Victor

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—The Yankees demonstrated their home run artistry to four Philadelphia pitchers today to swamp the Athletics, 9 to 4, although they outhit their foe only 11 to 10.

Red Rolfe hit two of the world champions' round-trippers, one with one on, and Tom Henrich and Joe Gordon provided two others, Henrich's also coming with a man on base.

For a while the contest looked as though it might be another touch and go struggle like the three previous games the teams have played this season.

Miles Opens With Single

Dee Miles opened the game with a single and Wally Moses followed with a home run, to send the Athletics away two runs ahead of the Yanks and Red Ruffing.

But after Henrich knotted the count in the second, Ruffing and Herman Besse, Connie Mack's rookie lefthander, settled down to pitch scoreless ball until Rolfe led off the fifth with his first circuit blow and Besse blew the lid, letting Charley Keller triple and Joe Gordon single and walking two men to fill the bases.

Ruffing's First Victory

The three righthanders who succeeded him had no better luck and the Yanks were never headed, even though Ruffing weakened to allow five hits and two runs in the last two frames. It was Big Red's first victory.

Lou Gehrig, the Yanks' former great first baseman who was forced to retire last season because of illness, watched the game from the champions dugout. Wearing street clothes, he was as usual without a hat or topcoat.

Detroit Ties For Second In Beating Sox

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 21.—Detroit's Tigers moved into a second place tie with Boston in the American League today by defeating the Chicago White Sox, 2 to 1. Tommy Bridges pitched five-hit ball, and Rudy York got his first home run of the season.

Bridges shut out the sox in his duel with Johnny Rigney until the eighth inning when two singles and a walk filled the bases. Then Eric McNair scored the only Sox run as Bob Kennedy hit into a double play.

York homered in the sixth, a smash into the leftfield upper deck stands. The first Tiger run came in the second after Hank Greenberg and York had fanned. Walks for Pinkie Higgins and Dick Bartell, and Birdie Tebbett's single accounted for the marker.

It was Detroit's fourth victory against two defeats, the same standing as Boston, which fell before Washington today.

Mrs. Meckley Leads Keefer Cup Tourney

Kenwood Golfer Shoots 83 at Chevy Chase To Pace Net and Gross Scores in First Day's Play; Elizabeth Houghton Is Second

In one of the highest scoring days in local women's golf tournament history, Mrs. Betty P. Meckley took the first day's lead in the Keefer Cup event yesterday at Chevy Chase with a gross 83, minus a two handicap for a net 81, the only sub-90 score in the starting field of 86.

In the net scores for the Keefer Cup, Mrs. Meckley, of Kenwood, was 2 strokes ahead of Elizabeth Houghton, of the host club, with 91-81, 83, while next in line for the gross award was Marion Brown, Manor, seven strokes back with a 90.

Although the women's tees were pushed to the extreme frontmost point on every hole and the course made as easy as possible, the good golfers and the higher handicapped players all had their troubles.

Mrs. Pray Cards 91

Back of Miss Brown's 90 and Miss Houghton's 91 were other top-notch players whose scores soared several strokes over their average, including Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. L. G. Pray with 91's, Mrs. Walter Stokes, 93; Mrs. Bishop Hill, 95; Mrs. Myron Davy, 96; Mrs. Ellen Harris, 97, and Mrs. Landra Platt, 98. Mrs. Hill made the day's best comeback, however, 52 on the front nine and 43 coming back for the 95. Mrs. Davy ran into 8's on 3 and 12.

Mrs. Meckley's fine scores included a trio of three-put greens, on six, ten and the eighteenth, where she bid for an 81 with a putt of some 25 feet, but it slipped by the cup and she missed coming back.

Plays Consistent Golf

The former holder of every major tournament in this section, and low gross winner in ner '40 debut last week at Washington, with an 80, dropped a short putt on the thirteenth hole for a birdie 2 and on all the long par 4 noles played consistent golf.

Miss Houghton played the nines in 46-45—91, and with the eight handicap is in second place. Mrs. Leo Walper, with the same score less a seven handicap, and Mrs. M. K. Barroll, of Army and Navy, 95-11—84, are tied for third. Mrs. Pray, 91-6—85, and Sally Whipple, Washington club champion, 96-11—85, are within striking distance in today's final round for the 32 low net scorers.

Mrs. Meckley is a prohibitive favorite to hold the seven-stroke lead for low gross.

Episcopal Wins 4-3, Over R.-M. Academy Club

2 Hits, Wild Pitch Break Deadlock in 7th; Buck Allows 6 Hits

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., April 24.—A pair of singles and a wild pitch in the seventh inning broke a 3-3 deadlock and accounted for the winning run as Episcopal High School turned back Randolph-Macon Academy, of Front Royal, 4-3, here this afternoon. It was the Maroons' second victory in three starts, and the Cadets' third straight loss.

Jack Buck went the rout for the Maroons and limited the visitors to six hits, while Thayer Porter hurled the full nine innings for Randolph-Macon and gave up ten safeties.

Trailing 3-2 going into their half of the sixth, the Maroons tied the game up when Dick Buck tripled and scored on Dave White's perfect bunt. In the seventh they pushed across the winning marker when "Bunny" Berkley singled, went to third base on a wild pitch, and came home on Dick West's clean single.

West's game-winning single climaxed a perfect day at the plate, which saw him drive out four hits in as many attempts. He also turned in a fine performance afield, handling five chances without an error.

Annapolis, Md., April 24.—Fordham University's scrappy baseball team, defeated the Naval Academy nine, 3 to 1, here this afternoon behind Sophomore Ed. Alex's three-hit pitching. He also fanned 15 men.

Giants Climb Up With 5-2 Phils Victory

Gain First Division With Second Straight At Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 24.—The New York Giants pulled a chestnut out of the fire today to take their second straight from the Phillies, 5 to 2, and climb into the National League's first division.

Although Hy Vandenberg parcelled out only five hits the Phils scored first in the fourth inning and tied the count at 2-all in the sixth, setting the stage for Rookie Babe Young, of the Giants, who came through with a home run with two mates aboard in the eighth. This was the seventh and last hit allowed by Hugh Mulcahy.

The Giants scored two runs in the fifth when George Scharein let a smash by Bill Jurgess go through him for an error when the bases were filled. Earlier in the inning the Giants had loaded the sacks and the Phils' pulled out with a double-play starting at home plate.

Pirates Bow To Cubs, 9-4; Bill Lee Hurls

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 24.—Big Bill Lee, who beat the Pittsburgh Pirates in five out of six games last year, picked up today where he left off, and steered Chicago to a 9-to-4 victory in the final game of their series.

For Pittsburgh it was the first setback in four starts.

The Cubs started fast and put the game on ice in the first inning, aided by an error by Shortstop Arky Vaughan, Pirate captain. Max Butcher started for Pittsburgh, but was pounded for three hits and five runs, succeeding in retiring only one man.

Johnny Lanning relieved Butcher and yielded two runs in the 4 2-3 innings he worked. Oadis Swigart was reached for two more runs on that number of hits.

Lee yielded 11 hits, but scattered them well with the exception of the first inning when the Pirates bunched three safeties for two runs. The Bucs also picked up tallies in the fifth and ninth.

Paul (Big Poison) Waner came through ash a pinch hitter for the third consecutive game, rapping out a clean single in the ninth. In three emergency appearances, the elder half of the Waner brother act has come up with a double and two singles.

G. U. Beats American, 20-0, in Weird Game

Base Lines Take Pounding as Hoyas Go on Rampage; Lone Eagle Gets Chance to Trot Down to First

The base paths at Georgetown's Medical Field got a thorough going over yesterday—by the home team, anyway—as the slugging Hoyas recovered from their first setback of the year at the hands of Fordham to trample American University's unhappy warriors, 20-0.

Only one Eagle, as a matter of fact, got a legitimate chance for more base running than the trot down to first. That was Outfielder Morrison, who registered the only safety off Jimmy Kiernan in the seven-inning field day.

In his first mound assignment for the Hilltoppers this year, Jimmy turned in the best looking piece of pitching the team has had in six games, five of which were won.

He allowed exactly no walks, fanned five. While the lanky right-hander was conquering his 1939 wildness with a vengeance, his mates were sloughing the offerings of three Eagle pitchers for 17 hits, four of which were for extra bases. Seven American U. misplays hurt not at all, nor did a total of eight bases on balls.

Georgetown's biggest eruption came in the third inning when nine players either raced or loped across home plate. Joe McFadden's homer with two men on and Buddy O'Grady's double with the same number aboard, provided the punch. Its first inning wasn't two minutes old when Georgetown tallied first, Johnny Schmitt and Hank Mlynarski singling and doubling in that order.

Bimelech Makes Season Bow Today at Keeneland Track

Only Three Entered in $5,000 Race

Roman, BashfulDuck Only Other Entrants In Blue Grass Stake Of Closing Day

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., April 24.—Bimelech and his stable mate, Bashful Duck, will make Col. E. R. Bradley's bid for his fourth one-two victory in the $5,000-added Blue Grass Stakes tomorrow at Keeneland race course.

Opposing the Idle Hour Farm's pair and completing the field will be Joseph E. Widener's Roman, one of the crack 2-year-olds last year. In his first 1940 start last Saturday, Roman won handily in the mud.

The mile and an eighth stake race tomorrow will be Bimelech's first test since he won the 2-year-old championship with six wins in as many starts. The Bradley colt won $135,090 as a juvenile.

Bimelech, Col. Bradley's hope to capture his fifth Kentucky Derby, is generally considered the best horse ever produced at Idle Hour, where such stars as Bubbling Over, Balladier, Blue Larkspur, Blossom Time and Bit o White and scores of others have been bred.

Col. Bradley's entries ran one-two in the Blue Grass in 1921, when Black Servant and Behave Yourself faced the field to the wire. The next year the Colonel saw his Busy American and Bet Mosie finish in front, and again in 1926 the Idle Hour's Bubbling Over and Boot to Boot were ahead.

HOLTON, allowed to settle into best stride, circled his field approaching stretch to take command in bold fashion and drew out while winning easily. HEAD HUNTER came to outside for racing room while improving position, but hung in final drive. SIR TIME lacked speed for a half and closed with rush. LADY ORCHID moved to contention with good energy approaching stretch, but weakened gradually thereafter. SCHLEY GOREE had speed for a half and stopped. JOLLY FLAG set good pace for a half and tired badly. DINAMITA was through after 5 furlongs. GROUCHNEUR set and forced pace and quit. SHALL WE DANCE flashed early speed.

PLEASANT LADY, showing keen speed from start, drew out, saved ground and held sway through stretch under hard drive. BETROTHED lacked early speed, came wide for racing room and closed full of run. PLOT was forward factor from start and swerved in stretch run while weakening. LEONARDTOWN closed willingly. HE GOES made up ground gradually to close energetically. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CERISSE III, $7.20, $4.20, $3.60; MORSTEP, $6.70, $5.40; DOUBLE BACK, $6.60.

CERISSE III came to outside for racing room while improving position swinging for stretch and wore down MORSTEP to win going away. MORSTEP wore down BUD'S LIGHT to take command leaving backstretch and drew clear, but could not resist winner while under pressure. DOUBLE BACK dropped back directly after start, improved position between horses and closed full of run. RISSA was off slowly and raced very wide to close with bold rush. PHARA BELLE saved ground to move up and weakened. RAZACLA was prominent to midstretch and stopped. BUD'S LIGHT set early pace and faded. KATE SMITH stopped after a quarter.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:03. Winner, Circle M Ranch's blk. g. (7), by Balkto—The Spare. Trained by W. B. Finnegan. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED TO SPARE, $6.90, $3.90, $2.70; TORCHLIGHT, $9.80, $3.60; COMO NO, $2.80.

SPEED TO SPARE, sent up on inside to take command in opening furlong, withstood repeated challenges of TORCHLIGHT and was drawing out at close. TORCHLIGHT was hard ridden from start and fought it out with good energy. COMO NO lacked early speed, came wide for racing room and closed with rush. NIGHT TIDE was squeezed back leaving backstretch and hung in stretch run. HELENO could not keep up.

FIFTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Aberdeen Stakes. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:34. Off 4:36½. Winner, H. M. BECOMLY, first away, was closest to pace of NANNYKINS in early stages, wore down latter to take command and held on with good courage in closing test. ZACOREL was squeezed back along rail in opening furlong, was taken up and steered wide to improve position and was wearing down the winner with every stride in final 20 yards. DOUBLE CALL raced forwardly in close quarters along rail and held on gamely. NANNYKINS had speed to go to front at once, was hard ridden and weakened. SOCRATIC showed a good effort. TRIPIT had a rough trip. ROAD SCRAPER broke poorly, was rushed to contention and stopped. MADIGAMA had early speed. BLUE TWINK was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:05½. FIRE BALL, allowed to settle into best stride while trailing to backstretch, came around horses gradually to take command entering stretch and won with some speed in reserve. ERADA was hard ridden, came wide for racing room entering stretch and closed boldly, but could not menace winner. PASCUA was in thick of early contention and weakened in final drive. COUNTER PASS rallied mildly. MASON B forced pace for half and tired. NUGGET set pace to stretch and faltered. NUDGE was through early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:35½. Off 5:36. Winner, W. Elliott's ch. g. Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

I'm not so sure that the new rule, which calls for a false start if one or more horses are kept from starting because the stall gates fail to open, will work to the best advantage. While "it is fair for one as it is for another," as we used to say around our way, the rule has a lot of possibilities that may not jibe with the bettors. In the two instances when a horse was left locked in his stall, Maryland officials were quick to make refunds. Of course, money bet on the non-starter was taken out of the pool and the odds were figured again. Under the present rule, the starter takes on the responsibility of judging whether or not the gate opens. If, in his opinion, which must be arrived at in almost split second time, he believes a horse is left in the gate, he must signal the emergency flagger placed down the track. The latter must signal the riders who have been instructed to pull up and return to the gate for a new start. I have seen several false starts, only one on a major track in Maryland. In each case there has been an emergency or recall flagman. But the jockeys, most of them, have kept right on riding, some even going the full route. Let's suppose there is a five-horse field with a 100-1 shot in it. Say four of the horses get away and the longshot is locked in the gate. Suppose the riders cannot, or do not, pull up and go the route of, say, a mile and a sixteenth. They must be brought back and will be lined up against a fresh 100-1 horse. That might be stretching one's imagination, but such could happen. I hope it doesn't, just to allow me to say I told you so. However, I would like to have a ticket on that kind of a 100-1 shot. Jockey Nick Wall, injured here last week when his mount tumbled with him at the head of the stretch, comes back to the races tomorrow. He is a veteran and has had spills before so he should be able to ride in his old style. J. E. Oros, the jockey who was leading Don Meade last year in the early season, came here to join his brother, George, now a star apprentice.

Confucius' Erada was second yesterday. Bank roll now $26. For today, he say: Hard Way for my deuce.

BILL.

First race—Miss Identify showed a promising performance when fourth to Road Scraper in her first start. She should improve after that race. Nancy V. was beaten a neck when competing against medium grade platers last start and looms as the chief contender. Last Bet can better his recent race.

Second race — Cleaning Time makes her seasonal bow today and receives top figure on the merits of consistent efforts with platers of this type last year. Kaptime is a winter raced horse and will have the advantage of recent racing. Spot Run is not outmatched and might prove a stout contender.

Third race—Zostera is another which has been idle all winter but he is reported to be ready and fit. This one has the class to whip this sort. Key Man raced impressively last week in similar company and appears next best. Grand Pageant, a recent winner, has a money chance but would prefer an off track.

Fourth race — Clingendaal displayed a little of his old class when second to Drudgery in a fast-run race opening day. He appears well placed today. Cacodemon runs an occasionally good race and could make trouble Double B looks capable of turning back the others.

Fifth race—Hard Way was a bang-up second behind a winning stablemate, Ringie, in a recent outing. He meets competition of cheaper caliber today. Damaged Goods is lightly weighted and dropping down from a class C handicap and may be a serious threat. Good Reception won his last at the expense of cheap platers.

Sixth race—Oversight needed his last race where he finished second to Felsun and two lengths in front of Greedan. The latter drops weight after his recent defeat and will be the one to beat here. Careful Miss is not outmatched and may be ready for a good effort.

Seventh race—Light Chatter was not perservered with when she tired while racing with higher grade platers. She meets cheaper contention today and dopes sl

Long Scores Winning Run On Bad Pitch

Emmett Heflin Fans 22 Batters, Allows Seven Hits; Foltz Slams Triple

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., April 24.—Emmett Heflin, of James Monroe High, and Johnny Murnane, of George Washington High, Alexandria, locked in a pitchers duel for 14 innings here this afternoon before a bad pitch by Murnane sent "Shorty" Long scurrying home for the run that gave the Fredericksburgers a 4-to-3 victory.

Heflin, brother of Ranny Heflin, now pitching for Scranton in the minor leagues, struck out 22 men and allowed seven hits during the time, only one of which went for an extra base. It was a triple by Foltz in the seventh with two aboard.

Murnane allowed eight hits and had 11 strikeouts to his credit. He matched pace with Heflin throughout the afternoon but at times seemed a trifle wild, especially in the late innings.

Each team collected three runs in the seventh on as many hits, singles by Billingsley, Brown and Grimes gave the Fredericksburgers their runs. Foltz, Murnane and Clift were accountable for the Alexandria trio of scores.

In the fourteenth after George Washington had gone scoreless in its half of the frame, Billingsley was tossed out at first, Brown singled for Monroe and gained third on passed balls. Long was walked and Pete Lowery gained first on a fielder's choice when Brown was tossed out at home. Grimes was at the plate with two strikes on him when Murnane pitched a low one that struck in front of the plate and bounced away from catcher Kreamer. Long who had been on third raced home. Brown, of Monroe, led the day's hitting with four singles in six trips.

Doubles Victory Gives Hoyas Edge After Splitting Singles

Georgetown's No. 3 doubles team of George Boyer and Jack Greene turned in a three-set victory over Bernie Blankin and Frank Mann to give the Hoyas a 5-to-4 triumph over George Washington's netmen yesterday on the Hilltop courts.

The Hoyas gained their victory by taking two of the three doubles matches after the six singles matches had been divided evenly. The duo of Don Martin and Gene Owens provided Georgetown with its other doubles victory, defeating Davey Johnsen and Bus Fleming.

In the feature singles match of the afternoon young Davey Johnsen, ranking local netman, wiped out an early deficit to defeat Martin, 3—6, 9—7, 6—2. Johnsen overcame match point in winning.

The Colonials also won the No. 2 singles match when Bus Fleming, playing with an injured atnkle, defeated Lee Ritger, 6—4, 6—3. The Hoyas countered by taking three of the remaining four singles matches.

SINGLES

Davey Johnsen (G. W.) defeated Don Martin (G. U.), 3—6, 9—7, 6—2. Gene Owens (G. U.) defeated Bernie Blanken, 6—2, 6—0. Bus Fleming (G. W.) defeated Lee Ritger, 6—4, 6—3. Myer Gelfand (G. Nats Beat Red Sox For First Victory run lead as if it were something sacred. In the only inning in which he permitted a man to reach base—the seventh—he threw a perfect strike past Williams and then struck out Foxx and Doerr to retire the side.

This Doerr had been the chief tormentor of the Nats earlier in the game. In the fourth inning he broke a 0-to-0 tie by walloping a home run over the left field wall after Haynes had pitched a single to Foxx and walked Cronin. And in the fifth, with two on base, Doerr tripled to the centerfield wall to bring his total for the day to five runs driven in. That last blow was achieved against Sid Hudson who relieved Haynes after the Sox had scored one run in the inning on Foxx's single.

All of a sudden, in the fifth inning, the Nats went to work on Grove to score four runs and wipe out Boston's 3-0 lead. Jimmy Bloodworth was the moving spirit in the uprising. After Travis had doubled off the centerfield wall, Bloodworth banged Grove's next pitch over the leftfield fence for a homer.

The uprising continued in full cry when Pofahl drew a walk and Evans singled him to second before Grove could get anybody out. Then, when Haynes laid a bunt down the third base line, Grove started to throw to third base for a force play, discovered that Tabor had left the bag uncovered. Whereupon Grove threw wild to first base and two runners scored, with Haynes pulling up at third on the error.

The Nats fell behind again, 6 to 4, when the Sox attacked Haynes and Hudson in their half of the fifth, and in the sixth with a glowing chance to tie the score Washington scored only one run. It was something of a feat to score only one run, inasmuch as the Nats banged Grove for three singles and a double in the sixth. The one run they did score evolved from a double play grounder after Walker and Travis had singled. Pofahl's single and Evans' double down the third base line were wasted.

But eventually came the epileptic eighth and Walter Masterson and the Nats, as you have been told, won their first triumph of the season.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Again this season, The Washington Post and Station WJSV conduct The Man of the Month contest to determine the Nats' most valuable players for each month. Following each game, Arch McDonald will distribute points to the Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Post will reward each winner of the Man of the Month contest with a $50 merchandise order.

Jimmy Bloodworth and Walter Masterson were co-heroes of the Nats' 9-6 triumph over the Red Sox yesterday and to that pair goes the bulk of the points in the latest Man of the Month award.

To Bloodworth, six points, because he drove in three of Washington's runs and figured in a fourth, and because his fifth inning homer off Lefty Grove with a man on base, Washington's first circuit clout of the season, put the Nats solidly in the ball game.

To Masterson, six points, because he pitched one-hit ball in the last three innings, enabling the Nats to take the lead, and protecting it with a superlative pitching performance in which he struck out four Red Sox.

To Cecil Travis, three points, because he made three hits, one a double.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because his single with the bases full in the eighth increased the Nats lead from 7-6 to 9-6. The totals:

Jimmy Bloodworth	12
Cecil Travis	9
"Dutch" Leonard	8
George Case	7
Walter Masterson	6
Al Hollingsworth	5
Buddy Lewis	5
Jake Early	2
Rick Ferrell	2
Bucky Jacobs	2

from this city; Beach, from Baltimore, and several of the Virginia pros were already on hand for practice rounds. A pro-amateur was scheduled for this afternoon and 36 holes tomorrow and Saturday in the championship proper. Banks, general manager of the Chamberlin Hotel, that is connected with the Chamberlin Club, had posted $1,000 as a flat guarantee, for the third year in the last four.

The calling of the tournament is probably the first step in a break of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., that has been brewing for years. The Virginia pros are reported forming an association under Cruickshank, who has seldom been active in local affairs.

Old Point Comfort is apparently a luckless site for the event. The first year it was nearly called off when the Baltimore boat caught fire in the bay, and several of the Baltimore pros swam to safety. The second year it was nearly postponed on account of rain. This year, and probably the last, it is definitely off.

Jacobs, Galento's Manager, Dies

lous stories told about him. One of the best known was the one when he took McTigue to fight in Georgia, taking along Harry Ertle as his own referee. The referee, of course, awarded the decision to McTigue, and the three of them had to dash for safety.

Later, because the Georgia boxing heads had reversed the decision, Jacobs got Ertle to sign an affidavit that McTigue had won the fight—the first time such a measure had been taken.

Jacobs stumbled onto Schmeling one day when the young German was first in this country looking for fights.

"Come with me, boy, and we'll get the fights," he said. Schmeling was an unpopular champion, but was constantly in the public eye, thanks to Jacobs' shrewdness as a publicist. He often wrote stories for the papers when he was managing a fighter and had a definite flair for newswriting.

Jacobs even dared to visit Germany when the Jewish persecution was beginning—but so audacious was he that he carried through the trip in the grand manner.

Possibly the second greatest night in his life was the night that Schmeling knocked out Joe Louis in the twelfth round at Yankee Stadium. The other was when he howled Max into the title with his cry of "foul" that was so insistent and perfectly timed that it caused Arthur Brisbane, who was sitting nearby to yell at the referee: "You call this a foul or I'll run boxing clear out of the State of New York."

Jacobs did only one other job of newspapering in addition to his write-ups of boxers. That was when he was assigned to cover a football game for a local paper. He had never seen a game before but managed to ask enough questions to turn out a creditable account.

That was one of the things of which he was most proud.

News Stuns Tony

Orange, N. J., April 24 (AP).—Heavyweight Boxer Tony Galento was stunned tonight when notified of the death of his manager, Joe Jacobs, in New York.

"I'm awful sorry. I've lost a good friend. I'm awful sorry," usually loquacious Tony murmured quietly after having the news repeated several times.

Dodgers Sell Almada To Rochester Club

New York, April 24 (U.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers today sold Outfielder Mel Almada to Rochester in the International League.

St. Albans Nine Scores Over Little Hoyas

First Victory for Saints; Davidson Allows Five Hits

In its first game of the year, "Dave" Davidson hurled St. Albans' nine to a 7-5 victory over Georgetown Prep yesterday, single runs in the seventh and eighth innings accounting for the winning margin.

Davidson gave up five hits and fanned ten Little Hoya batsmen in the game at the Saints' diamond.

Four runs in the first inning sent St. Albans off to a flying start, but Georgetown Prep grabbed a pair of runs in the third and three in the eighth to come within one run of knotting things. The Saints put the clincher on the game with their final tally in the last half of the eighth.

Though Barrett was touched for ten hits in the nine-inning game, he allowed but four walks to Davidson's nine. He also contributed a single to the losing cause. LeFevre led the winner's stickwork with a double and triple in two times up.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Profit Taking, Uncertainty in Scandinavia Disturb Security Price Levels, List Closing Apathetic Session With Half a Point Loss

New York, April 24.—Profit taking and uncertainty over the eventual outcome of the Scandinavian conquest unsettled security markets today and the stock list lost more than half a point on the average in fairly moderate trading of 854,330 shares.

The market was firm during the morning hours, adding to the progress made on Tuesday, but when steels turned downward in the afternoon, they were followed by various war issues and at the close only the rails and a few of the blue chip manufacturing issues were able to turn in strength.

Sellers of the steels apparently were caught unawares by the surprise announcement of the United States Steel Corp. of a price readjustment which fully restores the recent cut on flat-rolled products.

Buying Rush Possible

On the theory that buyers rush in when they foresee rising prices and hold back when the price structure looks weak, the move today may very well uncover a wealth of steel buying that has been retarded. The new prices become effective May 1.

The new schedule runs for five months, which is in itself an innovation, for usually prices are specified for a quarter only. Aside from the price situation, the trade reports a better export business and increased foreign inquiries which should mean greater tonnage, later.

Midweek reports from the majority of the major lines of business indicated some improvement. Carloadings are running higher and doubtless this contributed to the independent strength of the rails today. The accumulation of favorable items appears to be turning the trend of general business.

37 Reach 1940 Highs

Before the afternoon selling got underway today, there were 37 individual issues carried to new highs for 1940. Softness of the steels was illustrated by declines of 11⅜ in Bethlehem and United States Steel while Republic was off a fraction. The most active stock was Great Northern preferred, which advanced 1⅜ to a new high.

Leading issues to lose a point or more included telephone, Chrysler, duPont and Kennecott. Support was maintained in Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Harvester and Procter & Gamble.

Listed Bonds Firm

Listed bonds were firm with few exceptions. Even the foreign section showed signs of stabilizing. Danish and Norwegian were slightly improved. Most domestic issues managed to move slightly higher, despite modest inquiry. Trading remained under the $6,000,000 mark.

European bonds continued to move on war reports in Scandinavia. Bonds of the great belligerent states were uncertain, while Latin-American and Japanese obligations ruled firm. United States Treasury securities were idle, but steady.

Steel Prices To Be Upped By Carnegie

By the Associated Press

New York, April 24.—United States Steel Corporation has given automobile manufacturers and other users of "light steels" six days in which to place orders for future requirements at "bargain prices"—after that prices snap back where they were before price reductions a few weeks ago.

That was the way steel circles here interpreted Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's surprise announcement in Pittsburgh today that recent price cuts would be rescinded May 1.

With new orders coming in slowly, the big steel companies since the first of the year have been working down unfilled order backlogs. Operations have dropped to around 60 per cent of capacity, contrasted with the ten-year high at 94.4 per cent witnessed last November.

Hoping automobile companies might be willing to begin ordering metal for the 1941 models in advance, "big steel's" subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois, a few weeks ago made reductions of $4 a ton in hot and cold rolled sheets and strip, and allied "light steels" also were reduced accordingly.

The auto companies, however, didn't respond with a flood of forward business. Steel circles said the Carnegie-Illinois surprise announcement rescinding the reductions gives the auto makers and other steel users just six days to take advantage of the "bargain prices."

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—Curtailed hog supplies again boosted hog prices today, lifting top to $6.65, best since last November. Steer trade was slow and early sales steady to weak, while fat wooled lambs opened around 25 cents down.

Hog receipts in the open market totaled 9,000, or 2,000 less than advance estimates, while big packer direct receipts amounted only to 3,000. Most good to choice 180 to 300-pound hogs sold from $6.40 to $6.60. Strength in the livestock market was reflected in the dressed meat trade, where best pork loins advanced another ½ cent to 18½ cents a pound, highest since last October.

Bidding was generally 25 cents lower on both heifers and steers, and there was scarcely enough done on the latter to establish a market by midsession.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture)—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 9,000; total, 12,000; market very slow in developing to full extent; early action fully 10-15 higher than Tuesday's average; instances more; Now talking mainly steady prices; packing sows mostly steady; top, 6.65; good to choice 180-300 pounds, largely 6.40@6.60; few heavier butchers downward to 6.25; good 400-500 pound packing sows, 5.50@5.75; lights to 6.00 and heavies down to 5.35.

SALABLE CATTLE—Receipts, 11,000; salable calves, 1,000; steer trade opening slow; hardly enough done to fully establish market at midsession; few early sales both steers and heifers steady to weak; generally bidding around 25 lower on both classes; liberal run of heifers here; killing quality improved on both steers and heifers; prime heavy Nebraska fed steers held above 13.00 and strictly choice heifers held 11.00; early sales steers ranging from 9.00@11.75; but numerous loads held 11.50@12.25; better grade heifers early mostly 9.50@10.25; but several loads held above 10.25; cows scarce but slow, barely steady; bulls and vealers steady early; practical top weighty sausage bulls, 7.15; best heavy kosher vealers, 11.00.

Sweden Continues Gold Shipments

By the Associated Press

Sweden shipped $18,243,024 in gold to the United States last week. This amount increased to $154,000,000 that nation's transfers of gold to the safety of American vaults since the beginning of the European war.

Swedish shipments, regarded officially here as a precaution against possible invasion, have been outranked in recent months only by huge British transfers in connection with airplane and other war purchases in this country.

Total gold imports in the week ended April 17 were $72,373,539, or double the amount of the preceding week. British shipments included $9,856,591 from the United Kingdom, $15,070,362 from Canada, $5,476,028 from South Africa.

Total retail linage in all newspapers in the 80 measured cities was 20,508,175 during the week, compared with 19,305,747 during the corresponding week of last year.

Shipping, Traffic Executives Jam Careful Handling Sessions

With records completed for less than one-third of the perfect shipping and careful handling month meetings being held throughout the United States in April, the attendance of industrial executives, traffic officers and shipping department employes, along with the railroad representatives, already closely approaches that for the entire campaign of 1939.

At the 150 meetings thus far recorded in 1940, an attendance of 25,000 was registered compared with a total attendance of 29,462 at 398 meetings in 1939. Since approximately 500 meetings are to be held in 1940, a total attendance three or four times greater than in 1939 is expected.

Honors for attendance thus far this year go to Philadelphia and New York—the Philadelphia meeting with a registered attendance of 1,450 and the New York meeting with 1,398. The largest meeting recorded in the 1939 campaign was at Buffalo with 687 registered.

One of the features of the 1940 campaign, which has attracted a considerably larger attendance, is the talking picture "On Guard," prepared by the Association of American Railroads. This picture deals with loss and damage to freight shipments and presents practical means of overcoming these losses.

Another feature is a "quiz" period, during which those present are given the opportunity to answer questions of interest on packing, shipping, marking and all phases of freight transportation. In some instances opposing teams have competed in answering.

Cooperation of the Railway Express Agency has been particularly effective and helpful, with arrangements made to supply meeting rooms in railway express buildings, provision of projecting machines to show the talking picture and addresses by express officers.

Wheat Prices Sag Despite Rally Flurries

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 24.—Wheat prices continued to sag today despite intermittent rallies, with hedging sales against larger normal marketings at this time of year dominating the trade.

Selling based on reports of some crop improvement in certain districts also appeared, but this, as well as the hedging, was absorbed by purchases based on Southwestern dust storms and the war situation without material price losses.

Wheat was off as much as ⅞ to ¾ cent, but the close was ⅛ to ⅜ lower than yesterday, May, 1.10⅞ to 1.10¾; July, 1.08⅛ to 1.08¾; corn, off to ¼ up, May, 64¾ to 64⅞; July, 65⅝; oats unchanged to ¼ down; rye, ⅜ to ½ lower, and lard, ⅞ lower.

Capital Trails Richmond In Store Sales

Monthly and Quarterly Increase in District Is Shown in Report

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 24.—The monthly retail trade report of the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond showed today a 5 per cent increase in department store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District for March, compared with March last year.

Sales for the first three months of 1940 were up 7.9 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Department store sales were up during March 9.9 per cent in Richmond, 3.1 per cent in Baltimore and 3.6 per cent in Washington. For the three-month period of this year, they were up 7.8 per cent, 8.9 per cent and 7 per cent in those cities, respectively.

The Fifth District includes Maryland, Washington, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and most of West Virginia.

Upham Explains Court Ruling On Safe Deposits

For the first time, the United States Supreme Court held last Monday that national banks have inherent power to conduct a safe deposit business, Cyril B. Upham, Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, informed local bankers last night. Addressing a meeting of the safe deposit section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, at the Lee Sheraton, Mr. Upham explained that this opinion, given by Justice Reed, in the case of The Colorado National Bank of Denver v. Bradford, affirms the position taken consistently by the Comptroller of the Currency. The opinion upheld validity of a Colorado statute levying a tax on users of safe deposit boxes.

Experience of the comptroller's office in dealing with safe deposit facilities in closed banks shows that the safe deposit unit is usually about as well managed as the rest of the bank, the speaker said, reminding that one that has been poorly managed can be the source of great trouble.

A.B.A. Outlines Big Markets For Expansion

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., April 24.—A potential market for "enormous" expansion of industry in the United States was pictured today in a report handed to the executive council of the American Bankers Association, in spring session here.

Aimed to refute arguments the country's economy was maturing so that business no longer could fully employ savings, the report was drawn by the association's economic policy commission, headed by Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., Cleveland.

"More than half of American family incomes are still below $1,000 a year, and as long as any such condition exists we have an almost unlimited potential demand for better homes, better food, more clothing, improved housing, furnishings and greater amounts of the services that are rendered by public utilities," the report said.

"We sorely need great expansion of industrial output whether we have new expanding industries or not."

Nickel Company Plans $8,325,000 For Improvement

Toronto, April 24 (Canadian Press).—A capital budget estimated at $8,325,000 for 1940 will be expended largely in concentrator and smelter improvements to provide capacity for treating up to 30,000 tons of ore a day, Robert C. Stanley, chairman of the International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., told shareholders today.

Due to the war, operations have ceased at the company's property in Finland and the future of the property is uncertain, he reported.

Since hostilities began all export sales of nickel, copper and platinum metals have been made under Canadian government permits with the sanction of the British government, he said.

Heavy sales in the United States were supplying the company with sufficient United States funds for all requirements and there would be no interruption to dividend payments in Canada or other countries.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

Tragedy has really struck at the heart and home of Smoky O'Toole, for her father has lost his life, saving the life of Dagne Olsen Hetrick who lived next door. Clancy O'Toole was a former fire-fighter whose cronies had named his daughter Smoky, although her given name is Shamrock. Clancy had been retired for disability when a roof caved in on him in the line of duty some months before. The irony of it all is that Dagne is the girl who took away from Smoky the man she was planning to marry, the man for whom she had assembled a lovely trousseau, the man who had lived next door most of their lives. Karl Hetrick's mother had watched over Smoky after Mrs. O'Toole died, and Karl and Smoky had always expected to marry. But Dagne won Karl and they were living next door. Poor Smoky, mortified and humiliated and not wanting to show it, had taken a job in the chorus of a new Broadway show where she met Tex Stacy, a cowboy singer. When the show opened successfully, Smoky got up courage enough to suggest that Tex marry her. The ceremony took place quietly and without anyone's knowledge, but Tex and Smoky went home to Clancy's. It was after they had left for the theater the next night that the tragedy struck. Clancy had died, the Hetrick house was only a smoking ruin, and Dagne was in the hospital by the time Smoky and Tex came home.

Chapter 17

THEY buried Clancy with fire department honors, in his uniform.

For two nights Tex and Shamrock had been out of the show, and so the afternoon of the funeral Tex asked her: "Don't you think you'll feel better if you keep going, darling? The show must go on, you know. It's an old tradition and I think it's a good one."

Tex could not bear the desolate look in his wife's eyes and the way she went around the house like a sleepwalker. Anything to get her away from the old surroundings.

"I'll phone Melvin," Tex said. "He'll probably want to begin rehearsals right away for your new part in 'Go West Young Woman.'"

"I suppose so," Shamrock replied indifferently.

She was sitting on the couch, very straight and wide-eyed, with her little hands clinched in her lap. Tex sat down beside her but did not touch her.

A Visitor Comes

When the bell rang, Tex got up to answer it. He did not know the tall blond young man who stood in the door.

"I—could I speak to Smoky—Mrs. Stacy, please," the man asked, and Tex wondered at the pallor of his face.

Tex stepped back, puzzled, looking from the man to his wife.

"Dagne wants to see you," Karl twisted his hat in his hands looking away. "She sent me to ask you to come to the hospital."

Smoky said woodenly: "Well, I don't want to see her."

Karl's voice shook: "She—she's going to die, Smoky. You must go."

"Oh!" Shamrock gasped, sitting down swiftly.

Tex said tensely: "Of course you must go, darling. If some one is sick and asking for you. Shall I go with you?"

"I—I'll take her," Karl said in a low voice.

Karl jammed on his hat and started down the steps. "I'll—tell her you're comin'," he called back.

Tex asked no questions, but helped Smoky with her coat and kissed her cheek at the door when she left for the hospital. Intuition told him that the drama he had just witnessed was a tremendous one. Whoever the man was, he was in love with Shamrock.

Was his wife in love with the pale, distrought stranger? If so, that might be the answer to all the things that puzzled him about the girl he had married. Tex felt he had to know the truth.

Smoky Sees Dagne

At the door of Dagne's room at the hospital Smoky hesitated. Her heart beat coldly and her hands were like ice. Finally she gathered courage and knocked softly. A nurse opened the door.

"Mrs. Hetrick asked to see me," Smoky whispered, and the nurse nodded.

"You are Mrs. Stacy? She wants to talk with you alone a little while. The doctor says you're to stay not more than ten minutes."

Dagne lay inertly on her bed, and Smoky went over timidly. The figure swathed in bandages stirred: "Is it you, Smoky?" she asked weakly, and Smoky managed to whisper that it was.

Miss Brooks went out and closed the door softly. Shamrock gripped her hands. She wanted very much to hate the girl on the bed but she found she couldn't. The lump in her throat almost strangled her.

"Come close to me," Dagne whispered weakly. "I'm so tired, Smoky."

Shamrock could not see the face of her old enemy because the dressings were slit only at the mouth and nose to permit breathing.

"You hate me!" Dagne stirred, sobbing hopelessly. "Oh, Smoky, how you must hate me!"

"Oh, no," Smoky denied swiftly. "I—I'm sorry you're sick."

"Your—your father would be alive if it weren't for me," Dagne sobbed again. "Oh, Smoky, I wish he hadn't tried to save me. I'm—so sorry. I was smoking a cigarette on the bed and I fainted and set the bed afire. I was so sick."

Smoky was silent and Dagne added unhappily: "And—and I took Karl away from you."

Smoky sank into a chair beside the bed, gripping her hands. Dagne laughed bitterly and Smoky winced.

"Yes——" Dagne laughed again weakly, "I got him all right! And a lot of good it did me. He hates me."

"Oh, no," Smoky denied in a whisper. "He doesn't hate you, Dagne, or he wouldn't have married you."

"Oh," Smoky gasped. "Oh—Dagne!"

Dagne went on. "I've been trying to win him all my life. I loved—him so much I thought—it didn't matter."

Smoky said with a sob: "Oh, Dagne—I'm so sorry."

"You mustn't blame Karl," Dagne tried to raise on her elbow. "Promise me you won't blame him, Smoky."

"I—think it was rotten of him to treat you that way," Smoky cried out. "When you loved him so much."

The girl fell back on her pillows wearily: "But I don't want you to blame him, Smoky. He loves you, and if I hadn't thrown myself at him it would never have happened."

Smoky cried softly and Dagne went on: "He—he's been to see your show every night, Smoky, and he sent you flowers. I found the ticket stubs and the bill from the florist in his pocket."

"Oh—no!" Smoky cried out. "He—he mustn't do that! He must stay home and take care of you."

Dagne shook her head: "He won't have to take care of me, Smoky. I—I'm not going to live. Then he'll be free. I—I want you to get a divorce and marry him."

"Oh, no," Smoky protested. "Don't talk like that."

Dagne's Request

Dagne was growing very weak. She said painfully: "I know why you got married, Smoky. I'd have wanted to do the same thing. But you love Karl. I—it was my fault. You must get free and marry Karl. Promise me——?"

"Oh, I can't promise that," Smoky told her wildly. "You'll get well. Karl will be different. I know it!"

Dagne said hopelessly: "A girl is better off dead when a man doesn't want her. He doesn't respect me. We—could never be happy. I—want to die, Smoky. My—my father hates me now too. There's nothing—left for me to live for——"

The nurse came in softly: "You'll have to go now, Mrs. Stacy."

Smoky bent over Dagne tearfully: "I—I'll be back tomsee you, Dagne. When you're better."

Shift of Stress In Citizenship Training Urged

More Emphasis On Ethical Values Suggested at Seminar

More stress on ethical values in teaching citizenship was urged yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. by Dr. Robert Connery, director of the commission on American citizenship of Catholic University.

Too much emphasis is placed today on the mechanics of teaching citizenship and not enough on the teaching of the ethical principles underlying participation in a democracy, he said at a luncheon of the Washington round table of the national conference of Christians and Jews.

Participants in the day's round table on "The Function of Religious Education in Relation to Good Citizenship" agreed the conflict today is between religion and secularism.

"We have a sick society," H. E. Wornom, director of religious education, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, said, "characterized by plenty of energy without a goal, a secularized society with a facade of Christ."

Speaking for the religious education division of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, Joseph Cryden asserted "you can't be a good citizen unless you have faith in something higher than yourself." Communism and fascism have arisen from a materialism devoid of religious ideals, he said.

In the Catholic educational system, the pupil is taught to look upon his fellow men as children of the same father, God, and that an offense against one's fellows is an offense against God, said Dr. Edward Dowd, of Catholic University.

Albemarle St. Owners Get Final Notices As District Officials Act to Drain Pond

District officials from various departments met yesterday to provide a tentative solution to the Albermarle street "nuisance" case. Seated at the desk is Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; leaning over the desk and pointing to the plot of land in the 3700 block of Albermarle street northwest, which contains the water hole is J. Frank Butts, director, bureau of sanitation. Left to right (around the table) are Irving Bryan, secretary to Commissioner David McCoach, jr.; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; Edward S. Dawson, inspector of claims; Samuel Tapp, inspector of plumbing; Claude F. Browning, public health engineer consultant; Stanley DeNeale, assistant corporation counsel, and J. G. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering

The District moved yesterday to abate a nuisance which has vexed property owners in the 3700 block of Albermarle street northwest for two years and has been the center of considerable dodging among officials for about the same period.

Yesterday nine District officials met to discuss what should be done and how to do it. They decided to wait until the expiration of assessment notices which have been sent to two of the three owners of the property involved, then to make certain recommendations to the District Commissioners through the health department.

A notice against the third owner of the lot was prepared yesterday by the Health Department and probably will be served today.

Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner, who called the meeting of the officials, said the three property owners would be given this opportunity to abate the nuisance but that after the notices have expired, the District would take definite action.

The plan tentatively decided upon yesterday is to provide a drain pipe from the water hole to the storm sewer under Albermarle street.

Two notices were filed on April 19 and expire this Saturday. The notice prepared yesterday expires about May 1.

Contract Bridge

A rubber bridge declarer, or for that matter any declarer, cannot be too careful in his play of the cards. He must be ever alert to the traps set by the opponents; he must be ever on guard against bungling the hand himself.

S. C., a fine player and one of this column's oldest contributors, sends a hand from a rubber bridge game in which he was not quite attentive enough, going set at his contract of six diamonds when, with a little more care, he would have made it.

Here are the cards, without the bidding:

	♠ A 8 8 ♡ A K 9 8 4 2 ◇ 9 6 4 ♣ 4
♠ K Q 10 7 3 2 ♡ J 7 3 ◇ 3 ♣ 9 6 2	[NORTH] WEST EAST [SOUTH]	♠ J 5 ♡ Q 10 5 ◇ Q 7 5 2 ♣ A J 7 3
	♠ 9 4 ♡ 6 ◇ A K J 10 8 ♣ K Q 10 8 5

S. C. says: "I was playing the above hand in a rubber game and am sending it on to show the need for constant vigilance and planning in advance. The contract was six diamonds, which is too optimistic.

"The king of spades was led, which I took with the ace and immediately played the heart honors, getting rid of my losing spade. I now led the singleton club, which East took with the ace, and he led back a spade. I trumped with the diamond eight, and that was the end of my contract. I trumped a low club, establishing my clubs, and finessed the diamond queen, which worked. However, I had to overtake in my hand. My ace and king of trumps failed to drop the queen and I was one down.

"If I had trumped East's lead of the second round of spades with my ten instead of the eight, I would have been able to play the eight under the nine on the first round of trumps and be able to finesse again in case East had four trumps."
